SUIT CASE CRIME BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

Doctor Accused in Suit Case Crime.

FIRST GOOD PUBLISHED PICTURE OF DR. P. D. M'LEOD.

With arrest for complicity in the suit case mystery imminent, Dr. McLeod secured possession of the negative from which this photograph was made. Two prints had been made from it. One of these Dr. McLeod found; the other one is here reproduced.

We Have Begun the Crusade; These Dens Must Be Wiped Out

—Judge Emmons to Boston American.

I want the active support of the newspapers of Boston and the press throughout the State in suppressing these places.

I want everybody who knows anything about them to write me and tell me all they know.

I want information of persons who practice medicine without licenses.

We have begun the crusade. These places must be wiped out of existence.—Statement by Commissioner Emmons, in whose hands the Board of Police has placed the work of clearing the city of murder dens.

Big Crowd Sees Two Men Accused of Complicity in Susan Geary's Death Arraigned in Court—Forty Witnesses Tell Facts to Grand Jury—Murder Den War Active.

While the Grand Jury was hearing testimony from forty witnesses summoned to testify as to what they knew of the death of Susan Geary, the suit case victim, in one of the murder dens against which a crusade has been started by Police Commissioner Emmons, Dr. Percy D. McLeod and Morris Nathan were facing Judge Bennett in the Municipal Court to-day.

Dr. McLeod, having been released on bail, sat with his counsel, Charles H. Innes, outside the railing. Nathan was brought from the Tombs and placed in the dock with the usual collection of prisoners. In contrast to the calm manner of the physician, the fiance of the dead girl looked nervous, pale and ill at ease.

WANTED CASE HEARD TO-DAY.

Both Mr. Innes and Jesse M. Gove, counsel for Nathan, fought to have the case heard to-day. Captain Dugan protested that the case could not go on because the witnesses were all before the grand jury.

"We want to hear the evidence and prepare ourselves for the defence," said Mr. Innes.

GOES OVER TO MONDAY.

Judge Bennett granted a continuance until Monday for both men. Nathan's bail was fixed at $5,000. His father, Tobias Nathan, was in court and proceeded to make arrangements to have his son bailed.

Judge Emmons of the Board of Police is starting his crusade against the murder dens has issued an appeal through the BOSTON AMERICAN to the public asking that all persons who have knowledge of the existence of such places shall come to him with their information. He declares that the dens must go, that when the police are through with their efforts that not one shall remain in existence.

Along the corridor leading to the grand jury room to-day were scores of people who had been brought there to tell all they knew of the events leading up to the death of Susan Geary at the house, No. 68 Whitbon street, Roxbury, the disappearance of her body, its identification and the arrests which were made by the police of Boston and New York. Many police inspectors were on hand with volumes of information.

Many indictments will be asked for by the officials against those under arrest and others who have not been arrested as yet.

When indictment papers are returned against Louis W. Crawford and William Howard, or "Dr. Hunt," which is believed to be the issue he has gone under, Chief Watts and Superintendent Pierce will ask Governor Douglas for requisition papers. When these are signed they will be hurried to Albany, where the signature of Governor Higgins will be obtained. It is planned to have Crawford and Howard in Boston by next Monday morning, if no fight against requisition is made.

Mother and Sisters in Black.

Among the first arrivals at the court house to-day were three women in deep mourning, their faces concealed by long, black veils. They were Mrs. Catherine Geary, Mrs. Bertha Connell and Miss Evelyn Geary, mother and sisters of the girl victim. They were taken in charge by Captain Dugan and made comfortable until their turn should come to tell the Grand Jury their identification of the remains of Susan Geary.

Among the other arrivals were Albert Allen, one of the young men who found the first dress suit case at Winthrop containing the torso. Deputy Chief Neal of the State Police, Dr. Whitney of Harvard, Inspector Smith of the State Police, Undertaker C. E. Bouton of Winthrop, Chief Inspector Watts, Superintendent Pierce, Inspectors Ward Armstrong and McGarr, Chief McNeil and Inspector Douglas of the Winthrop police.

Other Witnesses.

Others who will appear are Leroy E. Talcott and G. Raymond Hodgen, the two Winthrop boys who pulled the dress suit case containing the torso of Susan Geary from the water at the Winthrop Yacht Club; Medical Examiner Harris, State Officers Whitney, Rhodes and Grady, Undertakers Frederick Briggs of Boston, the latter's two assistants, Osbourne Briggs and Joseph Allen; Pawnbrokers Berkman and Hirsh and the former's assistant, Myer Kaufman; Cabman Howard, Edward Frazer, the deckhand on the lighter C. A. Pike, who discovered the second suit case, and Driver Fred Wallace and Captain Duncan, the divers who found the head of the unfortunate girl.

To Hasten Matters.

The successful evasion of the police by the missing nurse, Mrs. Mary Dean, alias Hilfeather, and of another doctor in the case has moved the authorities to hasten the prosecution of the suit case matter before the grand jury. The decision to delay no longer in the hope of placing under arrest these two people who are being sought was reached last night and Chief Watts and Superintendent Pierce will immediately lay the evidence they have accumulated before District Attorney Sughrue.

After a short consultation it was decided to bring the case up at once, and ten sleuths were detailed from headquarters to serve subpoenas. They started out without delay, and were busily engaged in serving the witnesses throughout the night. The officers engaged in this work were Inspectors Abbott, McCausland, McGarr, Burr, Armstrong, Lynch, Sheehan, Waittie, Morrisey and Smith.

Secrets of Bishop Den.

It is hinted that before the police get through there will be some startling developments as the result of a close scrutiny

GRAND JURY PROBES THEFT OF BALLOTS

JEROME AND ATTY.-GEN. MAYER MOVE TO INDICT TAMMANY CRIMINALS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Under the direction of Attorney-General Mayer of the State of New York, and with the assistance of District Attorney Jerome, the grand jury to-day began the investigation of the charge of fraud and the prostitution of the ballot mails in connection with the election in this city on Tuesday last.

Attorney-General Mayer visited the Criminal Courts building early to-day, and had a long conference with Assistant District Attorneys Sanford and Perkins, to whom District Attorney Jerome has delegated the work of prosecuting the cases and of drawing up the indictments.

GRAND JURY BEGINS PROBE.

The Grand Jury met at 11 o'clock and Attorney-General Mayer immediately appeared before them. The jury will report to Recorder Goff at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and whether they will return indictments against election officials is a matter of conjecture.

Eight deputies of Superintendent of Elections Morgan, a number of policemen and about fifty other witnesses for the people were at the Criminal Court this morning waiting to be called before the Grand Jury to give testimony.

Superintendent Morgan received a number of ballots this morning which had been found by policemen and others in alleyways and out-of-the-way places, and it was apparent that they had not been counted.

These ballots, it is said, were found in the districts of two prominent political leaders, and it is thought that the investigation which the superintendent is making regarding them will lead to the possible indictment of at least two persons "higher up."

TO INDICT THOSE HIGHER UP.

At the Criminal Courts Building it was said to-day that efforts will be made to have the Grand Jury indict not only a number of the smaller election officials, but one or two district leaders, as the belief prevails that gigantic frauds were committed on Tuesday.

Besides hundreds of individual statements of intimidation alleged illegal voting and outright fraud, the District Attorney has the detailed evidence of Henry G. Grinnger and H. DeForest Baldwin, two young lawyers who acted as Jerome watchers at the polls on the lower East Side, and also that of three policemen.

Those three policemen, one from the West Forty-seventh Street station, the second from the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station, and the third from the Mercer street station, spent considerable time with Mr. Jerome yesterday, and made complete affidavits of what had occurred in their precincts.

UNSEALED IN A BARBER SHOP.

In Mr. Jerome's possession is a ballot box, found in the rear of a barbershop in the Twenty-first Assembly District (Grutzer's) filled with protested ballots. The box had never been sealed. This was taken to the District Attorney's office by Policeman Sharver of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station, who filed an affidavit setting forth all he knew regarding it.

The registration and polling books from the election district to which this box belonged also have been secured by Mr. Jerome. A comparison of the protested ballots with the two books shows that the most brazen frauds were committed, besides the fraud or criminal carelessness in disposing of the ballot box itself.

Superintendent of Elections Morgan and Attorney-General Mayer are working with Mr Jerome on the election frauds.

BANKER HEAD OF GRAND JURY.

Two members of Mr. Jerome's staff, Assistant District Attorneys Perkins and Sanford, have been assigned to co-operate with Deputy Attorney-General Mason and his assistants, and with Superintendent Morgan. Mr. Perkins is the Assistant District Attorney in charge of the Grand Jury, and all evidence obtained will be laid promptly before that body. J. Edward Simmons, the banker, is foreman of the Grand Jury.

In connection with the evidence thus far in the hands of the District Attorney there have been issued up to to-day sixty-five subpoenas for the appearance before the grand jury of persons mentioned in the statements now in the District Attorney's office. These subpoenas are for policemen, Jerome watchers at the polls and individual citizens who it is known were either intimidated at the polls or were fraudulently deprived of their votes.

One of the important witnesses whom

MASSACRE OF JEWS

St. Petersburg Hears Red Crosses Are Placed on Buildings for Slaughter Sunday Night.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—Reports are being persistently circulated that a regular St. Bartholomew massacre of the Jews and intellectuals has been planned by the "Black Hundred" of St. Petersburg for Sunday night. It is declared that all houses containing Jews are being marked by a red cross.

While it is undoubtedly true that the lower classes would like to be let loose the police declare they will suppress any attempt at an uprising.

Count Witte has ordered a thorough investigation of all the Jewish massacres and other disorders in the interior, where the police, troops and officials are charged either with inciting or with abetting violence, and he is determined to have all the offenders removed and punished.

The government reports that the mutiny at Kronstadt has been completely suppressed and that the mutineers who were holding out in the eastern part of the town have been arrested.

Report the Czar Prisoner.

Word reaches Count Witte that in some regions the reactionaries who are seeking to make the new regime odious are spreading reports among the peasants in the country and the lower classes of the cities that the imperial manifesto is a forgery, issued

UBERO HEAD ARRESTED ON LARCENY CHARGE

PROMOTER FREDERICK BORGES FACES ACCUSATION OF STEALING $11,000.

Ferdinand E. Borges, proprietor of the Ubero Plantation Company, and the Ubero Consolidated Plantation Company, was arrested to-day on State street, near his office, by Chief Watts and Police Inspector Armstrong on the charge of larceny of $11,000. The complainant is Warren D. Page.

Borges was taken to police headquarters and questioned there by Chief Watts.

Borges has signed himself "Boston manager" of the Ubero Plantation Company, which has gone into the hands of receivers.

There are said to be about 2,000. Fred C. Chamberlin is attorney for about 200 of them. To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, he said:

"I had not heard of Borges's arrest, but I expected it. He came here with another man from Indianapolis and promoted the two Ubero companies. It was the worst piece of work of its kind ever done in this city at the expense of investors. The latter put in about, I should say, $1,250,000. The assets are probably less than $5,000."

The crash which culminated in receivership proceedings began in a meeting held by stockholders in this city.

TO GIVE SPRINGFIELD $200,000 HOSPITAL

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 10.—Daniel H. Wesson, a manufacturer of revolvers, has announced his intention of giving to Springfield a new maternity hospital, to cost $200,000. The gift follows the erection of a homeopathic hospital for the city by Mr. Wesson and the presentation of extensive grounds for a park.

of some books of the Bishop concern on which appear names of persons treated at that office.

The police are on a still-hunt for persons who have had secret dealings with the Bishop office, and it is anticipated that before the Geary case has been threshed out in the courts testimony from these persons will be presented.

Many persons will appear before the grand jury to-day, it is believed, whose names have never yet been mentioned in connection with the suit case tragedy.

Howard's Wife Found.

The wife and child of Dr. "Howard," "Hunt" or "Roberts," as the police believe he has been known, have been found in Roxbury. For two years his wife and child, a boy of about five years, have been little from the husband and father. He has not kept them informed of his whereabouts or contributed much to their support.

His wife had no idea of his connection with the suit case tragedy or his experiences in Philadelphia or Boston, nor of all the disclosures made in the case of Susan Geary's death.

The Roxbury doctor who has been referred to in connection with the assertion that Dr. McLeod is alleged to have performed the second criminal operation as a desperate measure in the effort to save the girl's life—was summoned by detectives yesterday and examined by Chief Watts. He has not yet been placed under arrest, but will probably be arraigned before the Grand Jury to-day.

His connection with the case was as an assistant surgeon. The police assert that Dr. McLeod was the actual "doer" of the operation, and this Roxbury doctor, who flees almost within a stone's throw of Winthrop street, Roxbury, and who is a friend of Dr. McLeod, was called to assist in the delicate operation four days before the girl died.

He and Mrs. Dean are the only other persons known to have been present when, as the police declare, Dr. McLeod performed the operation. His testimony, therefore, in the absence of Mrs. Dean, is expected to be of value.

Says Operation Was Needed.

Whether the doctor made any admissions to the chief inspector is not known, but from what happened yesterday it is inferred that he gave some information of value.

It is understood that this doctor says that the operation which he and Dr. McLeod performed was necessary.

The physician declares that Dr. McLeod did all he could to save the girl's life, and that the operation was not only justifiable, but would unquestionably saved the life of Miss Geary had she not been so weak that she could not stand the shock.

The doctor remained all afternoon and evening at a down-town hotel with Superintendent Pierce and Chief Inspector Watts. He says that the girl at the time it is understood, that he might be on hand to go to Quincy for the formal inquest.

Search for Mrs. Dean.

The police of Halifax appear to be baffled in their search for Mrs. Dean. They have traced the mysterious woman at Hammond's Plains, who answered the description of the missing witness.

They felt sure that she was Mrs. Dean, but they found her to be a school teacher, who was spending her class when the officers arrived.

Efforts to trace the missing trunk which is supposed to have been landed at Yarmouth from one of the Dominion Atlantic steamers, also have failed. Inquiries have been made along the line from Halifax to Yarmouth, but nothing of a definite nature regarding the trunk has been learned.

ARRAIGN DR. M'LEOD AND MORRIS NATHAN

Morris Nathan and Dr. Percy D. McLeod, charged with complicity in causing the death of Miss Susan Agnes Geary, the pretty dancing girl who died in one of Boston's slumber dens after a criminal operation, were brought over from the city prison on Somerset street a short time before and was in the dock, side by side in front from McLeod. The accused physician wore a dark gray suit and a light tan gray overcoat. He was pale, but stepped upon the dock with a firm tread. He appeared extremely at ease. He wore a white turn-down collar and a striped dark blue tie with a gold stickpin in it.

After the charge had been read, Counsellor Dugan arose and asked for a continuance, explaining to the court that his witnesses were before the Grand Jury, which he expected would return a bill against Dr. McLeod, and that in view of this he could not go on with a hearing before the jower court.

Counsel Innes then said:

"It seems to me that in a case of this magnitude the hearing should be held immediately. The witnesses are here, Your Honor, and the defendant is here on heavy bail, at the order of this court.

Urges Immediate Hearing.

"We, who are the case to go on so we may learn the character of the evidence, so we may prepare ourselves for the case. I understand the charge is based on the confessions of the two men now in jail. In this case, and now in New York. We would like to have the hearing go on so we may learn the character of the charge, and be prepared to present our case.

"But the witnesses for the Commonwealth are before the Grand Jury," said Judge Bennett. "I will not be responsible for Captain Dugan to have his witnesses before this court and have the Grand Jury at the same time."

"But, your honor," said Mr. Innes, "we should have the privilege of hearing some of this evidence. It is but a matter of fairness to the defendant."

"The question to my mind is the holding of two separate hearings at the same time," repeated Judge Bennett. "If the Grand Jury returns no bill, this court can do nothing but discharge the prisoner. If it finds a bill, he must be held for the Superior Court."

"The defendant is in attendance in this court," said Mr. Innes. "The defendant is brought here at the order of this court. We should be given the opportunity to learn the character of the evidence, which, we presume, is that of persons implicated in this case, given only to the Grand Jury. This court should not be ousted of its jurisdiction, and the defendant's rights should be preserved."

Captain Dugan Objects.

Captain Dugan then said: "My forty witnesses are now before the Grand Jury, and cannot appear here until after they have testified before the Grand Jury.

"It seems to me that the Grand Jury has the right of way," said Judge Bennett to Mr. Innes.

"Your honor, I ask for a continuance," said Captain Dugan.

"If the case is continued beyond this afternoon, I will ask to pamper with," said Mr. Innes.

A short discussion of the sitting of the Grand Jury find the work before it followed, and then Judge Bennett said: "I confess I can see no reason for a hearing to-day, if that is satisfactory."

"It is satisfactory," said Captain Dugan.

Mr. Innes acquiesced, and the defendant was released on the same amount of bail, $3,000.

The clerk then called Morris Nathan.

Nathan's Case Also Goes Over.

Nathan stood up in the dock. His father was outside the room. The counsellor for the defendant, Joseph R. Dunbar, addressed the court and asked for a hearing. The court asked for the circumstances as applied to Dr. McLeod applied to Nathan.

"Have you arranged about bail?" asked Judge Bennett.

"I have had a conference with Captain Dugan, who agrees that $3,000 is sufficient," said Mr. Gove.

"Very well," said Judge Bennett. "I continue the case of the Commonwealth against Morris Nathan until Monday, November 13."

Nathan is rather good looking. As he stood in the dock he seemed very short, and did not appear to be more than six-teen years of age. His hair is black and curly. He wore a dark suit and a black tie, with white turn-down collar.

His father, Tobias Nathan, talked with his counsel and nodded pleasantly with his son, who smiled in return. The interested parties then left the court-room to arrange about bailing Nathan.

Revolting Defiance of Law, Right and Decency

From To-Day's New York Press (Rep.).

The Tammany job to steal the election with the illegal votes of the repeaters slipped its belt. There were too few votes. Illegal though they were, to enable the crooks to DECLARE the election of their man. When this was discovered they had to fall back on their absolutely last resort.

They doctored the COUNT, boldly and desperately—desperately, for the record is there, on the ballots, in the boxes; and they can go to State's prison on that record alone!

In one election district in the Sixth Assembly District (a Sullivan district) one of the officials has informed the editor of this paper that FORTY protested, void and other ballots which were not for McClellan were COUNTED for him.

We have had presented to us much other evidence of the same kind that is astounding for revolting defiance of law, right and decency. It will be found that 20,000 more Jerome votes were CAST than COUNTED; that many of these were also for Hearst. This can all be revealed to the court. It will show not only that McCLELLAN WAS NOT ELECTED, but that he was not, could not be within many thousands of election!

McClellan himself may hold the pernicious doctrine that the end justifies the means; Wall Street sharks may agree with him, and the Gas Trust, and the traction monopolies, and the contract grafters. But not the honest people of New York, Republicans, Democrats or any other!

It can be proved in the courts that McClellan was not elected. When it is proved, though the fraud of his managers and intimate friends gave him the COUNT, he must be barred from the Mayor's chair!

To permit a man, under whatever provocation, who was not elected, though he was COUNTED elected, DECLARED elected and sworn into office as MAYOR, would mean that under the boasted "respectability" of McClellan this city had plunged back into the vilest precepts and the most fiendish practices of Tweedism.

MOTHER AND BABES SAVED IN SEA OF FIRE

Heroic Rescue by Policeman and Fireman at Tenement Blaze.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The daring rescue of a baby, a child and a woman, was one of the exciting events at a fire early to-day which destroyed a lumber yard, two large tenements and a school house in Williamsburg. The blaze caused $100,000 loss to the tenements at No. 516 and No. 524 Broadway.

When the police arrived on the scene they went through the tenements, aroused all the inmates and drove them to the street. Apparently they overlooked the family occupying the top floor of No. 516, for when the lower floors of the house were a roaring furnace there came a faint cry from the top and there appeared at a window the terrified face of a child.

Policeman James J. Collins was up the blistering fire escape at a leap. He was followed by a fireman whose name was not learned, and the two waded through flames to get to the child. Collins was first there. He handed the child to the fireman, and then climbed over the smoulder-ing window sill.

He appeared a moment later with a woman in his arms. The woman, too terrified to scream, held a baby to her breast. Collins folded the woman and baby under one arm and climbed back through the flame and smoke. Mrs. Kiesing and her two children were the three persons saved.

ARMY AND NAVY VIE IN FETING PRINCE LOUIS

General Grant and Admiral Coghlan Banquet the British Peer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Prince Louis of Battenberg and his fellow officers of the British fleet in the British River were tendered a luncheon to-day on Governor's Island given by General Grant at which the Prince was the guest of honor. Upon their return from Governors Island the Prince and his party went to the Admiralty Navy Yard where a reception was held with Admiral Coghlan as host.

The day was such friendly rivalry in advance between the army and navy to see which could make the best impression upon his highness To-night the Prince and his officers will attend the navy alumni dinner, and to-morrow they will go on an excursion to West Point and take dinner there with Colonel Robert Thompson.

The North River was ablaze at night with lights from the electrical decorations of the long line of British and American warships, and both shores of the river were lined with thousands of people to witness the display. So brilliant a spectacle has not been witnessed in New York waters since the occasion of the welcome of Admiral Dewey back from Manila.

HEARST CONTEST IS EXPOSING FRAUDS

Mr. Jerome will bring before the grand jury is Superintendent Morgan. Another will be Mr. Baldwin, who was assaulted at the polling place where he was acting as a Jerome watcher.

Lawyer Granger, who is in a serious condition at his room in the Hotel Atlanta at Fifth avenue and Eleventh street, as a result of the beating he received at the hands of a gang of Tammany men, may not be able to appear before the grand jury for some time, owing to his injuries.

Assistant District Attorney Heard to-day made a formal complaint to Police Commissioner McAdoo against Police Captain Hussey of the East Twenty-second Street Station, charging Hussey with having held back the returns on election night from the "gashouse" district. His whole attitude, according to the complaint of the Assistant District Attorney, was such as to arouse suspicion as to his motives.

MR. HEARST OFFERS REWARD.

The search for fraud was stimulated to-day by the reward offered by William R. Hearst of $10,000 for evidence resulting in the first conviction of a Tammany district leader guilty of frauds against the ballot. This special reward is offered in addition to other rewards, bringing the total up to $27,000.

The Municipal Ownership League leaders contended to-day that a recount would not be made necessary in the election of William R. Hearst to a large plurality.

Discrepancies of from 10 to 50 tally sheets have been made which show conclusively that returned with elect Hearst without a recount.

MAYER ACTS WITH VIGOR.

Action by Attorney General Mayer in the election fraud cases was begun to-day. After threshing out the mass of evidence in his hands, he began issuing subpoenas as rapidly as possible.

"I intend to push these cases as rapidly as possible," said Mr. Mayer when seen at his home, No. 1275 West One Hundred and Twenty Third street, to-day. "I have received a full statement concerning the finding of a ballot box in the Twenty-first Assembly District and we, of course, know who the election officers in the particular election district were.

"This case in particular will be pushed as rapidly as possible and I shall keep Mr. Hearst advised as to the progress that is being made.

"I shall be occupied in the Criminal Courts building to-day until 1 p. m., but after that these cases of frauds will be worked on night and day."

BALLOT BOXES IN NORTH RIVER.

The most startling evidence of Tammany's corrupt and frantic efforts to cheat the voters of New York in the election of Tuesday was the finding in the North River of half a dozen ballot boxes filled with ballots.

The ballot boxes were thrown into the river after Mr. Hearst announced that he would fight the election. They were accidentally discovered, and immediately reported to Attorney General Mayer.

Mr. Mayer and District Attorney Jerome have united in their efforts to bring the perpetrators to justice. In a statement issued during the night Attorney-General Mayer said:

"I have been informed of the finding of ballot boxes in the North River and the matter will be most thoroughly investigated. The wrongdoers shall be brought to justice."

HEARST BALLOTS THROWN OUT.

Julius Henry Cohen, counsel to the Citizens' Union, has begun proceedings for the recognition of the election returns, in the rooms of the Board of Elections, discovered that the ballots were thrown out of the official returns. All "protested" Hearst ballots had been treated as void ballots in a number of precincts.

An examination of the returns from one election district of one Assembly district by Lawyers Youge and Whitney, acting for Mr. Hearst, disclosed the fact that the certified returns showed that while 317 votes could be properly counted, the inspectors returned 333 votes counted, so that on the face of the returns sixteen votes are fraudulent.

Attorney General Mayer, his deputy, Mr. Mason, Superintendent of Elections Morgan, District Attorney Jerome, and three of the latter's assistants, started forgal co-operation for the prosecution of the election frauds immediately. More than forty known persons, chosen principally by Mr. Morgan, were hustled all over the city to do rapid fire work, and arrests of all of it is believed be made to-day.

HUNDREDS OF AFFIDAVITS.

Streams of witnesses, citizens, ballot clerks, election captains and policemen flowed in and out of Mr. Morgan's offices at No. 27 William street, where their depositions were taken. The affidavits of Patrolman Schryver regarding the stolen or hidden ballot box was taken in the presence of all the prosecuting attorneys, several stenographers being employed to take his and others' testimony.

At midnight, when the council of attorneys decided to adjourn, preparatory to more vigorous work to-day, it was learned that four election inspectors, two ballot clerks, two poll clerks and several policemen, who were in charge of an election district in the Twenty-first Assembly District, of which Abe Gruber and Matt Smith are, respectively, Republican and Democratic leaders, are formally implicated in the disappearance of a ballot box.

In one assembly district the vote announced by the police for McClellan was 4,737. The vote shown by the canvass yesterday was 4,733. The vote announced for the police for Hearst was 1,030, yet the canvass shows 1,057 for Hearst. A fraud on the face of the returns that shows thirty-one votes against Mr. Hearst, which should belong to him. This gives a percentage of one and a third votes in this election district in the assembly district, which would mean a change of 2,307 votes in the entire city.

FRAUDS BECOME APPARENT.

The result of the investigation of Julius Henry Cohen, taken in connection with the admission of the "error" in addition of the Staten Island election clerk, bring the plurality of McClellan down from 3,845 to 2,900, without regarding the work done by Mr. Hearst's own lawyers.

At every move made by the counsel for the Municipal Ownership League the McClellan plurality dwindles away. If it be shown, as indicated, that the practice of clearing "protested" ballots as void was general throughout the city, there will be no necessity for a recount, and Mr. Hearst will be shown to have been elected mayor by a startling plurality.

THEORIES ABOUT FOOD

Also a Few Facts on the Same Subject

We hear much nowadays about health foods and hygienic living, about vegetarianism, and many other fads along the same line.

Restaurants may be found in the larger cities where no meat, pastry or coffee is served and the food crank is in his glory, and arguments and disorles galore advanced to prove that meat was never intended for human stomachs, and almost make us believe that our sturdy ancestors, who lived four-score years in robust health on roast beef, pork and mutton must have been grossly ignorant of the laws of health.

Our forefathers had other things to do than formulate theories about the length of their ate. A warm welcome was extended to any kind, from bacon to acorns.

A healthy appetite and common sense are excellent guides to follow in matters of diet, and a mixed diet of grains, fruits and meats is undoubtedly the best.

As compared with grains and vegetables, meat furnishes the most nutriment in a highly concentrated form and is digested and assimilated more quickly than vegetables or grains.

Dr. Julius Remmson, on this subject, says: "Nervous persons, people run down in health and of low vitality should eat meat and plenty of it. If the digestion is too feeble at first, it may be easily corrected by the regular use of "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal. Two of these excellent tablets taken after dinner will digest several thousand grains of meat, eggs or other animal food in three hours, and no matter how weak the stomach may be, no trouble will be experienced if a regular practice is made of using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply the pepsin and diastase necessary to perfect digestion, and every form of indigestion will be overcome by their use.

"That large class of people who come under the head of nervous dyspeptics should eat plenty of meat and observe the proper digestion by the daily use of a safe, harmless digestive medicine like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, composed of natural digestive principles, pepsin, diastase, fruit acids and salts, which actually perform the work of digestion. Cheap cathartic medicines, manufactured under the name of dyspepsia cures, are useless for indigestion, as they have absolutely no effect upon the actual digestion of food.

Dyspepsia in all its many forms is simply impossible if one stomach to digest food, and the sensible way to solve the riddle and cure the dyspepsia is to make daily use, at meal time of a preparation like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which is endorsed by the medical profession and known to contain active digestive principles.

THOUSANDS CHEER AS E. J. DONOVAN DECLARES FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

E. J. DONOVAN AT TREMONT TEMPLE RALLY.

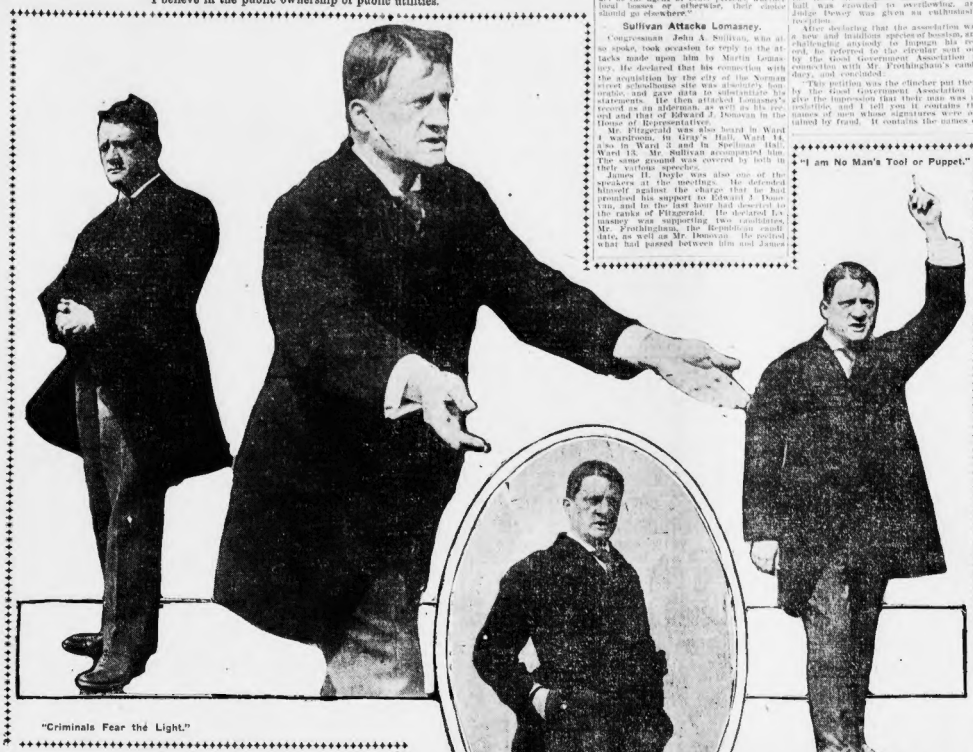
"I believe in the public ownership of public utilities."



"Criminals Fear the Light."

"A Municipal Electric Light Plant Should Be Established."

"I am No Man's Tool or Puppet."

Candidate for Democratic Mayoralty Nomination Outlines His Platform at Big Meeting.

Edward J. Donovan, one of the Democratic candidates for the mayoralty nomination, in the first speech of his campaign last night, came out squarely and emphatically in favor of the municipal ownership of public utilities.

Mr. Donovan declared that Boston should own and operate its lighting plants. There was no equivocation in his utterance. He gave his reasons. They were that it would be for the good of the whole people to have the city conduct the lighting business.

The temper of the people of this city on this question was shown when Mr. Donovan made his declaration. They cheered him with an enthusiasm that indicated he had touched the pulse of their approval. Nothing that the candidate said was more heartily cheered. It was the most exuberant demonstration of the evening, except that which followed the introduction of the candidate himself.

The declaration of Mr. Donovan and the unanimity of the audience in backing him makes the question of municipal ownership one of the vital issues of the municipal campaign.

Not only did Donovan come out clearly on this question, but he asserted that John F. Fitzgerald was backed by the corporations and that they were attempting to control the nomination for the mayoralty.

For Municipal Ownership.

The whole trend of Donovan's address at Tremont Temple and at other places was that he was for municipal ownership of public utilities, because he thought it would be for the benefit of the whole people, and that he was against the corrupt corporations and grafters of all kinds.

Mr. Donovan said:

"I believe in the public ownership of public utilities. A municipal electric light plant should be established. More lights are needed in Boston's streets. An electric light on a street corner is better than a policeman. Criminals fear the light.

"My opponent says: 'The contract for lighting the public streets of the city ought to be entrusted to the hands of the city.'

"With this I heartily agree, and I further agree with the resolution recently passed by the Central Labor Union that a municipal electric light plant should be established by the city of Boston for public lighting. I firmly believe that the public lighting of the city could be done by the municipality much cheaper than it is done now, and the service greatly increased and improved.

"The establishment and the operation of a municipal electric lighting plant would be a good object lesson in municipal ownership, and I believe one that would convince the people of the advisability of the public ownership of public utilities."

Will Be No Tool Nor Puppet.

"You are told that if I am elected I will be but a tool and puppet in the hands of others. The columns of a hostile and corporation-controlled press loudly proclaim it, and the public men who never obtained political recognition except as a glib-tongued 'machine,' so-called, repeat it through pique and disappointment to promote their own selfish purposes.

"I am but an ordinary member of the human family, and with ample imperfections, but in all the years of my public activities I challenge man or press to point to a single act in that public record that bears the imprint of another name.

"I have no supernatural gifts, nor rights divine, in the course of my life. I have sought good advice, and tried to follow it. The people of this Commonwealth are filled with men who never did either. I have formed through life many friendships strong and sincere, and I value them highly; not for all the civic honors of the world would I never them. For my part they shall terminate only at the grave.

Corporations Oppose Him.

"I believe that those who know me will credit me with sufficient intelligence to form a judgment and ample firmness to execute it; but the question, my friends, is not so much whether I shall be a puppet or a tool as it is whose I shall be.

"If I would be false to the people whom I would faithfully serve, the papers that now attack me would praise me instantly.

"You would be told that I was a man courageous, fearless, true and independent, and that no man would control me. If I would but secretly agree to be friendly to the interests of certain public service corporations I might to-day have their support in place of their opposition. I have spurned their invitations, and rest my fate in the hands of the plain people, with whom I have in every path from childhood walked.

"I was trained in a home plain and simple, as were your homes; and in them all there was a high moral standard, and we who dwell there breathed a pure, moral atmosphere. Upon our walls hung, not the works of the great masters, nor in the niches of the halls the chiseled marble of the sculptor stood; but around those humble, glowing firesides were the breath and moving creatures of a living God.

"There was not there a wealth of gold, but there was a wealth of happiness. Those homes to-day bear a heavy burden, and I would lift it so far as possible. I would cleanse the pay rolls of the city of many grantsmen. No man should be employed unless his services were necessary and he gave to the city a full equivalent for the compensation he received.

"The vast majority of our citizens support themselves and their families with wages from private employment, and they should not be taxed to support public grantsmen.

Have Made No Pledges.

"I have made no pledge to individual or corporation. My only pledge is to the people, and my sacred word of honor that pledge, if I am elected, I shall fulfil. My head is not crowned by inordinate ambition. I crave neither place nor power.

"I would not accept the mayoralty with the shackles of any machine, individual or corporation to bind me. If elected, no one will ever charge me with a broken promise. No honest man need fear for my election; I will be true to the best interests and welfare of my native city. I will do naught to mar her ancient glory, nor dim her brilliant lustre. My every energy will be directed to place her upon a pedestal of progress and prosperity so high that she would serve as a beacon to guide the destinies of other municipalities that she would be, as she should be, and as once she so proudly was, the leader in all good things in the American commonwealth.

Let the Word Be "Reform."

"Nineteen centuries ago from the shores of Galilee the brave apostles sailed forth, preaching the word—and the word was God. From this simple fo-light let these hosts of democracy go forth, spreading the word—and let the word be reform.

"Inspired by your presence, and moved beyond expression by the warmth of your greeting, I shall go forth, bearing aloft the golden of party principles with which you have entrusted me; and be assured whether to victory or defeat, it shall never be disgraced or dishonored. I would bring you through the Appian way that leads to the palace of the mighty despot—rather along the path fingered with the sentiments of honorable manhood and womanly justice, to the temple of municipal administration, over whose portals shall be inscribed:

"Progress, Peace, Prosperity, Equity, Economy, Efficiency."

ENTHUSIASM FOR FITZGERALD AS HE MAKES TOUR OF CITY

Large audiences bubbling over with enthusiasm greeted candidate John F. Fitzgerald on his continued whirlwind tour of the Boston wards in his campaign for the Democratic mayoralty nomination. Although he reached the Dudley Street Opera House ahead of schedule time, the place was filled, and he was given a rousing reception. Chairman Henry P. Nawn of the Ward 21 committee presided. Mr. Fitzgerald said in part:

"The results of the State and municipal elections of last Tuesday show that the public is aroused as probably never before in this country against the evils of the boss system in politics. From Boston, where an independent candidate for mayor polled more votes than any organized support defeated an experienced official who had received the nomination from both parties, to San Francisco, where the present mayor has been elected upon a labor ticket against the opposition of both parties, the same spirit seems to be aroused among the voters.

"People Are Aroused."

"The people are learning that their passive surrender in the past of the right to make nominations into the hands of a small group of politicians or of one man absolutely controlling as its head a highly organized political machine has resulted in perversions of popular government, which in many cases have turned democracy into autocracy. They have determined to overthrow all systems, machines and bosses who stand in the way of genuine democracy and of honest government. Such is the lesson as I interpret it of the recent elections.

"While I am asking for a party nomination, I do so reserving all of my political and personal independence; if I am nominated and elected, the Democrats of Boston and the people of Boston, without regard to party, will know that the seat of executive power will at all times be found in the Mayor's office in City Hall. I shall be indebted to no political sponsor for my nomination, and no political boss or ring shall directly or indirectly control any act of mine.

"If the Democrats of Boston desire some change in existing political and administrative conditions, if they desire a man of such character as they know me to be as their candidate for the high office of Mayor, I shall be proud to receive their nomination, if they are out of sympathy with the political ideas and independence of control for which I stand, if they should prefer a different kind of city government from that I would give them, if they would rather choose some political system which will produce a Mayor who will represent and act as the agent of other persons, whether local bosses or otherwise, their choice should go elsewhere."

Sullivan Attacks Lomasney.

Congressman John A. Sullivan, who also spoke, took occasion to reply to the attacks made upon him by Martin Lomasney. He declared that his connection with the acquisition by the city of the Norman street schoolhouse site was absolutely honorable and gave data to substantiate his statements. He then attacked Lomasney's record as an alderman, as well as his record and that of Edward J. Donovan in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Fitzgerald was also heard in Ward 3, Odeon Hall, in Ward 9, Lyric Hall, and also in Ward 3 and in Speltonia Hall, Ward 13. Mr. Sullivan accompanied him. The same ground was covered by both in their various speeches.

James H. Doyle was also one of the speakers at the meetings. He defended himself against the charge that he had promised his support to Edward J. Donovan, and in the last hour had deserted to the ranks of Fitzgerald. He declared his enemy was supporting two candidates, Mr. Frothingham, the Republican candidate, as well as Mr. Donovan. He related what had passed between him and James Jamaica Plain, however, that he attacked the Good Government Association. The hall was crowded to overflowing, and Judge Dewey was given an enthusiastic reception.

After declaring that the association was a new and insidious species of boosism, and challenging anybody to bespeak his record, he referred to the circular sent out by the Good Government Association in connection with Mr. Frothingham's candidacy, and concluded:

"This petition was the clincher put there by the Good Government Association to give the impression that their aim was irreducible, and I tell you it contains the names of men whose signatures were secured by fraud. It contains the names of men who supported me before and who support me to-day.

Agents Guilty of Trickery.

"I do not say the officers in person were guilty of this trickery, but the agents employed in their behalf were, and when the Good Government Association tries to pick out candidates for the people they are on dangerous ground, and they have got to stand responsible for the fraud and trickery perpetrated by their agents.

"There are names on that paper of personal and political friends of mine who were back of me in my candidacy before it was ever announced, and are to-day back of me, and who were induced to sign that paper, when I was out of the country and could not be reached, by the lies and frauds on the signature that I was out of the contest and had agreed to withdraw. That is how their names were obtained on that paper."

$10,000 FROM HARVARD MAN.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Princeton University has received $25,000 in endowments during the past month, including a gift of $10,000 from a fellow at Harvard University to establish a fellowship in chemistry.

GOOD GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION GUILTY OF FRAUD—DEWEY

Fraud, trickery and deceit have been charged against the Good Government Association by Judge Henry S. Dewey, independent candidate for the Republican mayoralty nomination.

Attired in immaculate evening dress, Judge Dewey invaded the ballwick of Louis Frothingham, the Republican candidate candidate for the nomination, in Tremont Temple Hall, Roxbury station, Jamaica Plain, he addressed a large gathering. He spoke in the same light vein that characterized his opening address of the campaign at the Dudley Street Opera House, and without spleen toward his opponents. When cheers were proposed for Frothingham, whom the speaker called a good fellow, Judge Dewey led the cheering.

Attacks G. G. A.

It was at the meeting in Sammett Hall, Roxbury, that Judge Dewey made a new and insidious species of boosism, and challenging anybody to bespeak his record, he referred to the circular sent out by the Good Government Association in connection with Mr. Frothingham's candidacy, and concluded:

"This petition was the clincher put there by the Good Government Association to give the impression that their aim was irreducible, and I tell you it contains the names of men whose signatures were secured by fraud. It contains the names of men who supported me before and who support me to-day.

Agents Guilty of Trickery.

"I do not say the officers in person were guilty of this trickery, but the agents employed in their behalf were, and when the Good Government Association tries to pick out candidates for the people they are on dangerous ground, and they have got to stand responsible for the fraud and trickery perpetrated by their agents.

ACTOR HORACE LEWIS IS DEAD

Old-Time Boston Favorite Passes Away at Brookline Home.

SUPPORTED MANY STARS

Horace Lewis, long a Boston actor, is dead at his home, No. 687 Washington street, Brookline, after a long illness. The disease was valvular heart trouble. He became ill in New York a month ago and came home. He rallied at times, but each improvement was succeeded by a relapse.

He was Horace Lewis Smith in private life, and was born in South Boston. He was on the stage for thirty-six years, and played many parts, supporting almost all the great stars of his time. He was a member of the Castle Square Stock Company in later years.

He was a versatile and finished actor and one of the few on the stage who were successful after William Warren's death in roles that the latter made his own.

He has acted with Edwin Booth, E. L. Davenport, John Brougham, John F. Raymond, John McCullough, Dion Boucicault, Frank S. Chanfrau, Adelaide Neilson, Maud Granger, Mary Anderson, Mrs. John Drew and Janauschek.

"The Ralston Bank Burglary" $100 Prize Story

Begin to Read This Story To-day. It Will End in Next Sunday's Paper. On Saturday You Can Guess How It Ends and—if You Solve the Mystery—You May Win One of These Prizes.

Synopsis of Preceding Parts

THE steel safe of the Ralston National Bank is blown open and robbed of $129,000, part of which had been counted and checked by Philip Dunston, receiving teller, and those of Miss Clarke, secretary to President Fraser of the bank. Cashier West actually places the money in the safe.

Just before the safe is locked Fraser enters the bank and takes something out of it. Apparently he puts this in his inside breast pocket. Dunston is positive that before the safe was closed and locked at the time they left the bank, yet in front of the safe is found a handkerchief, the property of Cashier West. This handkerchief was evidently left by the burglars, although Dunston and Miss Clarke saw West leave the bank with a handkerchief in his hands.

Fraser, stunned into inactivity by the blow, sends for Professor Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen, an eccentric scientist, and called the Thinking Machine, for whom he has done a favor. He believes the Thinking Machine can solve the mystery, the police having done nothing. Minutia, attaching no importance to the handkerchief.

With the Thinking Machine comes Hutchinson Hatch, a reporter. To them are told what is known facts. The Thinking Machine examines the handkerchief, on this handkerchief he finds a faint odor of perfume. He moves around the office, speaking to the employes. Dunston he finds has a handkerchief like that on the handkerchief.

To the amazement of the bank officials the Thinking Machine sends Hatch away to find out whether Miss Clarke has ever used violet perfume; also if perfume is used in the home of Cashier West, whose handkerchief was found. West becomes angry and says no perfume is used by him self or any member of his family.

The Thinking Machine, to placate him, says the investigation may exonerate him, and by elimination declares that some one employed in the bank planned and had a hand in the robbery. He then says that only two persons there use perfume, Miss Clarke, who uses a strong rose scent, and Dunston.

The Thinking Machine insists on search ing the employes. Most of them agree, only two, Dunston and Miss Willis, a stenographer, objecting. Miss Clarke said nothing, but faints in Fraser's arms just when she is asked to retire with the other women for the search of the three women employes.

There is no result from this search up to Fraser, who shortly protests such a search is unnecessary in his case, because he is president of the bank. Despite this objection he is finally searched and ten thousand dollars of the stolen money is found in his inside breast pocket.

Fraser is taken to his home in what seems to be a dangerous condition due to a collapse and his old age. The Thinking Machine, at home, is informed by Hatch that nowhere in the West family is perfume used; that the man is wealthy and The Thinking Machine instantly suspects speculation as the source of his fortune. Hatch has also found out that Miss Clarke is known to have used perfume, but the housekeepers there she lives does not know what kind. That night Miss Clarke calls on the Thinking Machine, is questioned closely about her relations with Dunston, and while admitting that he loves her and she loves him, declares a marriage is impossible. She tells the scientist that the package of 5,000 has again disappeared, but he is not surprised; then she tells him that she will give him the name of the person who robbed the safe.

The second of a series of mysteries which come under the observation of Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen, Ph. D., LL. D., etc., etc., so-called.

"The Thinking Machine,"

By

Jacques Futrelle.

(Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal Examiner.)

[illegible] Miss Clarke had expected that The Thinking Machine would show either astonishment or enthusiasm, she might have been disappointed, for he neither altered his position nor looked at her. Instead he was gazing thoughtfully away [illegible] with luck [illegible] eyes, watery blue in the light of the electric bulbs.

"Well?" he asked. "I suppose it's a story. Begin at the beginning."

With a certain well-bred air of timidity, the girl began the story, and occasionally as she talked there was a little tremor of the pretty lips.

"I have been a stenographer and typewriter for seven years," she said, "and in that time I have held only four positions. The first was in a law office in Cincinnati, where I was left an orphan to earn my own living; the second was with a manufacturing concern, also in New York. I left there three years ago to accept the position of private secretary to William H. Ranlett, president of the Ralston National Bank, in Hartford, Connecticut. I came from there to Boston and later went to work at the Ralston National Bank, as private secretary to Mr. Fraser, one of the bank in Hartford because of the fall of [illegible] that concern, following a bank robbery.

The Thinking Machine glanced at her suddenly.

"You may remember from the newspapers," she began again.

"I never read the newspapers," he commented tersely.

"Well, anyway," and there was a shade of impatience at the interruption, "there was a bank burglary there similar in many respects to this robbery, at the Ralston National Bank. Only $70,000 was stolen, but it was a small institution and the theft precipitated a run which caused a collapse after I had been with it about seven months."

"How long have you been with the Ralston National?"

"Almost a month," was the reply.

"Had you saved any money while working in your other positions?"

"Well, the salary was small—I couldn't help it," she added quickly.

"How did you live those two years from the time you left the Hartford bank until you accepted this position?" demanded The Thinking Machine, suddenly.

The girl answered a little.

"I received assistance from friends," she said finally.

"Go on."

"That bank in Hartford," she continued with a little gleam of resentment in her eyes, "had a safe similar to the one at the Ralston National, though not so large. It was blown in identically the same way as this one was blown."

Work of an Expert

"Oh, I see," said the scientist. "Some one was an expert for them, and you want to give me the name of that man?"

"Yes," said the girl. "A professional burglar, William Dineen, was arrested for that robbery and confessed to it. After his arrest he boasted of his ability to blow open their safe. He used an identification of his own for the burlags to place the charges, and the similarity was at once noticed this one. There is a striking similarity in the appearance of the safes."

The Thinking Machine stared at her.

"Why do you tell me?" he asked.

"Because I understood you were making the investigation for the bank," she responded unhesitatingly, and her cheeks dreaded the notoriety of telling the police.

"If this William Dineen is still at large you believe he did this?"

"I am almost positive."

"Thank you," said The Thinking Machine.

Miss Clarke went away, and late that night Hutchinson Hatch appeared. He looked weary and sank into a chair gratefully, but there was a gleam of satisfaction in his eye. For an hour or more he talked with the eminent scientist, and evidently told him of many important things. At last The Thinking Machine was satisfied, nearly.

"One thing more," he said in conclusion. "Notify the police to arrest William Dineen, professional bank burglar, and his pals, whose names are on record from newspapers in connection with a bank robbery in Halifax. They are wanted in connection with this case."

"Yes," said the reporter.

"When Mr. Fraser recovers I intend to hold a little party here," the scientist continued. "It will be a surprise party. By the way, how is he?"

"Hasn't been heard," said the reporter.

It was two days later, and the police were apparently still no nearer a complete beginning from which they could proceed, when The Thinking Machine received word that there had been a striking change for the better in Mr. Fraser's condition.

Then the scientist sent for Detective Mallory, with whom he held a long conversation, and evidently a satisfactory one, for the detective went away tugging at his heavy mustache and smiling audibly. With three other men he disappeared from police quarters that afternoon on a special mission.

A Surprise Party

That night the little "party" was held in the apartments of The Thinking Machine. President Fraser was first to arrive. He was pale and weak, but there was a fever of impatience in his manner. Then came Cashier West, Receiving Teller Dunston, Miss Clarke, Miss Willis and Charles Burton, a clerk whose emergency as the pretty Miss Willis had been only recently learned.

The party gathered, each staring at the other curiously, with questions in their eyes, until The Thinking Machine entered the room, rubbing his fingers briskly. He and him came Hutchinson Hatch bearing a shabby grip sack. His face showed excitement, despite his rigid efforts to repress it. There were some preliminaries, and then the eminent scientist began.

"I am the thief," he said, in profane, "we will take it for granted that no member of the Ralston National Bank is a professional burglar. But the person who was responsible for that burglary, who shared the money stolen, who planned it, and actually worked in the execution is in this room—now."

There was a gasp of astonishment, but it found no expression in words, only in the faces of those present.

"Further I may inform you," went on the scientist, "that no one will be permitted to leave this room until I finish."

"Permitted?" demanded Dunston. "We are not prisoners?"

"But you will be if I give the word," was the response, and Dunston sank back dazed. He glanced uneasily at the faces of the others, then glanced quickly away.

"The actual facts in the robbery you know," went on The Thinking Machine, "you know that the safe was blown, that a large sum of money was stolen, that under the safe, and all the rest. You will tell you what I have learned. We will begin with President Fraser."

Against Mr. Fraser is more direct evidence than against any one else, because in his pocket was found one of the stolen bank packages containing $10,000. Mr. Fraser needed $80,000 previous to the robbery, immediately following his discovery he had in his possession $80,000, which he said he had saved.

"But"—began the old man with death like face.

"Never mind," said the scientist. "Next take Miss Willis. Curious eyes were turned on her, and she, too, grew suddenly white. Against her is less direct evidence than against everything else. Miss Willis positively declined to permit a search of her person until she was compelled to do so by the fact that the other two ladies permitted it. The fact that nothing was found has no bearing on the subject. She did refuse.

Lost in Stocks

"Then Charles Burton," the inexorable voice went on calmly as if in mere discussion of a problem of mathematics, "Burton is engaged to Miss Willis. He is another. He has recently lost $20,000 in stock speculation—all he had. He needed more money in order to give this girl who refused to be searched a comfortable home.

"Next Miss Clarke, secretary to Mr. Fraser. Originally she came under consideration through the fact that she used perfume, and that Mr. West's handkerchief, which was found, contained a faint odor of perfume. Now it is a fact that for years Miss Clarke used violet perfume, then on the day following the robbery suddenly began to use strong rose perfume, which obliterates a violet odor.

"Miss Clarke, you will remember, fainted at the time of the search. I may add that she is short while ago was employed in a bank which was robbed in the identical manner of this one."

Miss Clarke sat apparently calm, and even faintly smiling, but her lips trembled a little and her face was white. The Thinking Machine paused a moment, then turned suddenly to cashier West.

"There is the man," he said, "whose handkerchief was found, but he does not use perfume, has never used it. He is the man who would have had best opportunity to leave unfastened the window in the private office which the thieves entered the bank; he is the man who would have had the best opportunity to apply a certain chemical solution to the granite floor, which, used in large quantities, softens granite so they could be pulled out; he is the man who has unprocessed facts to me. He told me he did not have and had not tried to raise any especially large sum of money, but on the day following the robbery he deposited $125,000 in cash in his bank. The stolen sum was $129,000. That man, there."

All eyes now turned on the cashier. He seemed choking, started to speak, then dropped back into his chair, pallid and weak.

"And last, this man Dunston," resumed The Thinking Machine, and he pointed dramatically at the receiving teller. "He had equal opportunity with Mr. West to know of the amount of money in the bank; he refused first to be searched, and you influenced his act a moment ago. To this man now there clings the identical odor of violet perfume which was on the handkerchief—not a perfume like it, but the identical odor."

Many readers of last week's prize story failed to get the solution of the mystery because the supply of paper was exhausted at their newsdealers." The only way to make sure of obtaining the final chapter of this story is to order your BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN today or to-morrow.

There was silence, dumfounded silence, for a long time. No one dared to look at his neighbor now, so tense the interest and the tension. At last The Thinking Machine spoke again.

"As I have said, the person who planned and participated in the execution of the burglary is now in this room. If that person will stand forth now and confess it will mean a very different punishment in the term in prison."

Again silence, interrupted by a knock at the door, and Martha thrust her head in.

"Mr. Hatch wishes to see you at the door," she said.

There was the accomplices of the guilty person, the man who actually blew that safe, deserted the scheme dramatically. "Again, will the guilty person confess?"

No one stirred.

To Be Concluded in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

$100 in Prizes for Solutions.

One hundred dollars will be given away each week to those who solve the mysteries in these stories of "The Thinking Machine."

NEW RECORD FOR EXPORTS

Ten great steamships clearing from Boston for seven foreign ports during the past week made a record in exports for Boston by carrying out cargoes aggregating 50,000 tons, including 534,000 bushels of grain, with a total valuation of $2,603,000.

Since the 1,000,000-bushel shipment of grain in one week in 1900, the shipment of the past week is the largest from Boston. The significance of this fact is that it shows that the port of Boston is holding its own in the rapid increase of exports from all the seaport towns and cities of the country which has been taking place within the past few months.

BOY FELL FROM ROOF.

Patrick Glennon, an eleven year-old boy, living at Forest Hills, fell from the roof of a stable at 3,500 Washington street and broke his left arm below the elbow and injured his head severely. He was taken to the hospital it was said that he would probably die.

MRS. HUBBARD REPORTED SAFE

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., who has been exploring in Labrador, and for whose safety fears were entertained, has reported her successful completion of the expedition. The following telegram, signed by her and dated Wednesday at Chateau Bay, Quebec, was received to-day by Herbert L. Bridgman, of Brooklyn:

"Successful. Will return home by the steamer King Edward."

TOOK MORPHINE TO END DESPONDENCY

Suffering with despondency, due to ill health, Jennie Pingg, aged twenty-two years, of No. 359 Washington street, Somerville, is alleged to have taken one and one-half grains of morphine. She was found by a business partner in the morning and was taken to the City Hospital, where she is on the dangerous list.

NOVEL THEFT OF DRESS ON A CAR

By a novel ruse a thief got away with a valuable velvet gown belonging to Mrs. F. L. Fales, of No. 131 Crescent street, Waltham, as she was returning to her home from a shopping expedition in Preston. As she left the car the unknown man noticed that she had left a bundle.

"She has forgotten this bundle," he exclaimed, and picking it up followed her from the car, with the evident purpose of returning it. Instead of walking up to her, however, he jumped on a moving Boston-bound car and disappeared.

Mrs. Fales reported the theft to the police, but was unable to give an adequate description of the man. A number of her friends noticed the theft, but none of them could tell what the man looked like.

STOP! WOMEN

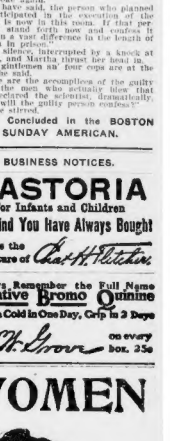
AND CONSIDER THE

ALL-IMPORTANT

FACT



That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private life to a woman—a woman whose experience with woman's diseases covers a great many years.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a foolish modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can only talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month with my periods. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have ovarian and womb trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do. I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 321 O Street, S. W., Washington, D. C.

Second letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After following carefully your advice, and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimonial, that others may know their value and what you have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 321 O Street, S. W., Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

by revolutionists, of whom Count Witte is the head, and who hold the emperor prisoner in the palace.

Such stories, circulated among the ignorant peasantry, are apt to prove almost as dangerous now as they did when the peasantry rose to support Pugatcheff in his claiming to be Peter III., called on the people to overthrow Catherine II. The clergy throughout the country, under instructions from the holy synod, are doing all in their power to counteract the effect of such pernicious reports by explaining to the people in the churches the real meaning of the reforms.

Rear Admiral Nebogatoff, who has arrived here from Japan, is posting as a martyr, declaring that he deliberately sacrificed his name and honor by surrendering at the battle of the Sea of Japan in order to save the lives of the 2,000 sailors of his division.

The Admiral's son has been forced by the derision of his companions at the naval academy to leave that institution.

Military Depots in Flames.

A dense pall of smoke hung over Kronstadt all day, and the dull glow of fire could be seen through the falling snow. Eight government military depots were aflame. Fugitives who arrived here tonight say the mutineers set fire to the greater part of the town, and when the fugitives left the mutineers were masters of the situation. Troops were employed only to guard the arsenal. While only a few details can be verified at the moment, it is certain that the situation has been very serious. One account says that the crews of eleven warships mutinied and landed. They have held the town for twenty-four hours, terrorizing the people, looting and firing at random. The inhabitants crowded aboard steamers in the harbor, abandoning their houses to the plunderers.

Two municipal officers are among the killed. The total number of casualties cannot be estimated.

Impossible to Enter Town.

All day it was impossible for anybody to enter the town. The telegraph poles on the line to St. Petersburg were cut down for a distance of four miles outside the town, so that telegraphic communication was cut off and the telephone also ceased to work.

The last event which is known to have taken place before communication with the fortress was severed was the arrival at Kronstadt of a boat from St. Petersburg with 150 sailors who had been arrested in the riots in the capital last week. They were loaded on a steamboat which started for the fortress. On the way the sailors overpowered the crew and took control of the boat which arrived at Kronstadt flying a red flag.

The emblem of revolution was seen from shore and a mass of soldiers and sailors assembled to welcome the mutineers.

Two hours later the town and fortress were entirely in their possession. The sailors plundered the government spirit depots. They secured several machine guns, which they used against the troops.

Many More Outbreaks.

The warships have been ordered out of the harbor. The Fourteenth and Eighteenth Marine Corps, stationed in St. Petersburg, are showing an insubordinate spirit. A detachment of the guards regiment is stationed in their barracks. There has been no disturbance yet except some smashing of windows.

Agrarian outbreaks have taken place at Saratoff, Chenkoff and Tula. Peasants are pillaging the estates of land owners and the police are powerless to prevent them.

MACHINE GUNS LITTER STREETS WITH DEAD BODIES

KRONSTADT, Nov. 10.—Kronstadt at daybreak today was a shambles. Dead bodies lay about the streets, singly, in twos and threes and in heaps. The gutters ran with blood. Those sections of the city that have not been levelled by the flames are still burning. In every nook and corner in every alley are bodies of the unburied dead.

—As dawn broke, from the dark corners, cellars and other places of concealment where they had crept for safety from the deadly vengeance of the troops and sailors, who shot down without mercy the mutineers from the "Seventh Fort Equipage," crawled the wounded, begging for water and surgical aid.

Since the mutineers broke their barracks thirty-six hours ago and descended upon the city the inhabitants have been subjected to every form of outrage. The sailors, several hundred strong and all heavily armed, left their quarters, vowing vengeance against the authorities and all who attempted to interfere with them.

Vodka Added to Terrors.

They were joined by gangs of soldiers and the work of pillage and slaughter began. The first move was against the vodka shops. Four of these were broken into and plundered and their contents inflamed the mutineers' lust for blood. The scenes that followed cannot be depicted.

The shrieks of women the screams of children, the groans of the wounded and the rattle of musketry as the mutineers sought their victims, made the day and night horrible in the extreme.

As night fell the mutineers fired buildings in all parts of the city and the flames lit up the scene of murder. For hours the streets were as bright as in daylight and by the light of the flames that destroyed all their worldly possessions the terror-stricken citizens were shot, stabbed and beaten to death.

At first the loyal troops in the fort made no effort to check the mutineers. Then driven to action by the outrages that were being committed, the machine guns were brought into play. For hours the leaden hail swept the streets. Innocent inhabitants and mutineers alike suffered. Hundreds were shot down like mad dogs, to lie weltering in their blood until death put an end to their sufferings.

Escape Impossible.

Caught between the fire of the mutineers and that of the machine guns, the citizens tried to escape. Leaving the household goods behind them, they ran to the harbor, seeking boats in which to leave the city of death. Hundreds who started for the beach met death on the way. Driven into alley ways and corners like rats, they were shot or stabbed without mercy.

When the awful night was over corpses of men and women were piled in the gutters, in alleys and in doorways. Here and there a weak movement under a pile of bodies showed that there were a few to whom merciful death had not come. At the barricades, which had been erected at almost every corner in the hope that they might prove a shelter from the deadly storm of bullets, were more bodies. In many instances the bodies of the defenders of these barricades had been used to strengthen the defenses of the living.

Slaughter Renewed.

When the fire of the machine guns finally ceased those who were left alive and uninjured hastened to aid those in the streets whom aid would avail. The hospitals were filled to overflowing. The work of bearing away the dead for burial began. Scores of bodies were flung into shallow ditches and hastily covered by a few inches of earth.

Before half the bodies that littered the streets had been removed the conflict began again.

Fully 10,000 strong, the troops moved out of the forts toward the city. At the head were the mounted Cossacks of the guard and the Uhlans. Following them came the infantry of the line and the garrison of the forts.

The mutineers had improved the time to strengthen their barricades and were prepared to receive them. Even with their ranks depleted by the incessant fire, they were fully 5,000 in number, but, fired with their long hours of fighting and debauch, they were unable to make a concerted resistance.

Barricade after barricade was carried, with but little loss on the part of the loyal troops. Hundreds were shot down like dogs, and hundreds more were captured and hustled off to the forts under guard to be dealt with later. Then the battle degenerated into a man hunt.

Searchlight Aid Troops.

Only in the eastern part of the town was there any organized resistance. The inhabitants remained indoors with barred doors and boarded windows, while the soldiery patrolled the streets in search of refugees who had tried to escape vengeance by hiding.

Martin guns were brought from the forts and placed in a position to command every street. It was deemed best to wait for daylight before moving on the few malcontents who were still holding out, as their position was hopeless, and it was hoped they would surrender without further bloodshed.

The searchlights from the warships and gunboats in the harbor aided in the task of ferreting out the individual mutineers who were trying to escape to the mainland by boat by playing their searchlights on every outlet from the city. The streets, too, were thrown into the glare of the lights, and it was hardly possible for a man to escape detection.

CLERGY APPEALS FOR A CESSATION OF SLAUGHTER

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—"Priests are unworthy ministers of the Chalice if they stand idle while Christians are murdering each other and their brothers, the Jews," declares an appeal to restore internal peace which the orthodox clergy have sent to all provincial priests.

Prince Obolonsky, the new Procurator General of the Holy Synod, was largely instrumental in putting out the appeal, which adds:

"We are servants of Him who taught us to love our enemies. Let us elevate the cross above the blood which has been shed over it, and in the hour of freedom insels eternal peace, before which every party must bow."

The appeal is timely. Seventy Jews were killed and 120 wounded in the slaughter at Kishineff, a miniature of that in Odessa.

Nine out of ten were victims of rifle bullets and bayonets, for the troops shot down or stabbed the Jews who defended themselves. The slaughter and pillage ceased when the Governor received an order from St. Petersburg. The looting began by order, too. The city officials and gendarmes made inflammatory speeches near the Governor's house, asserting that the Jews had tried to kill the local bishop and meant to loot the treasury. Incited, the mob started the bloody work, and carrying ikons and portraits of the Czar, went to Alexandrouskaia, Puskinskia and Gostinkain streets, killing, burning and robbing

$49,000 QUEER COIN MELTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—More than a quarter of a million dollars worth of counterfeiting bank notes, "queer" coins, dies, plates and other counterfeit money making apparatus, was destroyed by the Treasury Department at its triennial house cleaning yesterday. The counterfeit bank notes were burned in furnaces at the Treasury and the coin and appliances were melted into pigs at a local foundry. The "queer" coin alone amounted to $49,000, being the largest consignment ever destroyed by the government at one time.

WOMEN IN FIRE PANIC IN HOTEL

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif., Nov. 10.—The Ramona Hotel, a three-story structure of 200 rooms, filled with Eastern tourists, largely women and children, was destroyed by fire to-day.

Although there was a panic among the guests, all escaped and saved their bag gage. The loss is $250,000.

HE STEALS TO FURNISH HOUSE

PUTNAM, Conn., Nov. 10.—Henry Mahew of Dudley, Mass., living near Woodstock valley, was taken to Brooklyn jail charged with breaking into the Aplin house, unoccupied, on the North Ashford road, and stealing a stove and several chairs, besides setting the house afire. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the Superior Court under $500 bonds.

Mahew is a woodchopper and has a wife and four children. He stole to make his family comfortable, he says, and fired the house to cover up his crime.

BROOKLINE ABLAZE WITH COLOR FOR THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY OF ITS BIRTH

HISTORIC SPOTS THE MECCA OF BROOKLINE FOLK TO-DAY.

Formal Exercises Begin with Oration by Senator Lodge at Town Hall.

Brookline is gay with festal color. The Stars and Stripes are flying from every staff and the whole town is bright with bunting, for to-day is begun the celebration in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the incorporation of the town.

The business men of the town have taken an active part in preparing to make the celebration noteworthy. Nearly all of the business houses on the main streets, both at Brookline village and the Allston and Brighton lines, are completely covered with decorations.

The Town Hall and police headquarters are handsomely draped with bunting, the entrances being arched with large American flags. Every fire station has been trimmed with tri-color. The interior of the town hall presents a pretty picture. On all sides have been placed hundreds of flags and many inscriptions. Streamers of tri-color and the stars and blue field have been strung from the ceiling to the walls.

The day was ushered in by the ringing of bells and the sound of fire crackers. The people of the town were early astir, even though the formal celebration does not begin until afternoon. But there were visitors from other towns to be welcomed, and native sons and daughters returning for the event, and, furthermore, everyone awoke with the festal spirit.

The exercises will open with an oration by the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge in the Town Hall at 3 p. m. Moses Williams will preside and the benediction will be pronounced by Bishop Lawrence. At the conclusion of the oration the guests and committees will be entertained at Masonic Hall.

At 8 p. m., an elaborate display of fireworks will be given at the Cypress street play grounds, and a band concert will be given as well.

To-morrow morning, the second day of the celebration, will be ushered in by day fireworks at 9:30 a. m. on the Cypress street play grounds. Immediately after the fireworks the school children, under the escort of the G. A. R., headed by the Brookline Band and Drum Corps, will parade from the Cypress street play grounds to the dedicatory exercises at the First Parish Church, at 10:30 a. m.

At 11 a. m. on Saturday, a memorial tablet will be dedicated by the Sons of the American Revolution, at the triangle of Walnut and Warren streets. Charles H. Stearns will deliver an historical address.

The school committee will have charge of the musical festival, which will be given by members of the different schools of Brookline at the Town Hall at 3 p. m. Sunday, November 12, the third day of the anniversary, commemorative services will be held in all the churches. Monday, November 13, the celebration will be brought to a close with a banquet in the Town Hall at 6 p. m. The toastmaster will be Captain R. G. F. Candage, and the following gentlemen will respond to the respective toasts:

Lieutenant-Governor Guild to "The Commonwealth," Acting Mayor Daniel W. Wheiton to "The City of Boston," James L. Codman, Jr. to "The Town of Brookline," Rev. James De Normandie, D. D. to "The Church," and Judge Dunbar to "The Bench and Bar."

CANDIDATES TO DECLARE ON MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Requests Sent to Aspirants to Office in Boston Asking Them to Define Their Positions.

The Municipal Ownership League has sent a query as to how he stands upon the municipal ownership question as it relates to the lighting plants of Boston to every candidate for the Board of Aldermen and the Council.

Following is the form of the letter addressed to the candidates by the league:

Dear Sir:

If you are nominated and elected to the City Council will you advocate and vote for the passage this coming year of the resolution or order providing for one or more municipal gas and electric lighting plants in Boston, so that the question may be submitted to the people for final decision at the polls? The measure was passed last January by 59 to 7 in the Council and 9 to 3 in the Board of Aldermen. If passed again this year it goes to the voters at the polls. If not passed this coming year the work already done will be lost, as the law requires that the measure shall be passed in two consecutive years before it can go to the people.

The question amounts simply to this: Are you willing to allow the matter to go to the voters and let them decide it?

Silence after a reasonable time for reply will be deemed equivalent to a negative answer. Please mail reply in enclosed envelope. Yours,

FRANK PARSONS.

Referendum committee—Frank Parsons, chairman; Edward Everett Hale, Robert Treat Paine, Edwin D. Mead, Henry Abrahams, Louis Prang, Henry Sterling, John A. Conforti, Daniel J. McDonald, George E. McNeill, Ralph Albertson, C. L. Pollock, secretary.

The following letter from the National Public Ownership League accompanied the other one:

"Dear Sir:

Will you, if elected to the City Council or Board of Aldermen, vote to submit to the people the question of establishing a municipal lighting plant now pending under the resolution passed last January 59 to 7 in the Council and 9 to 3 in the Board of Aldermen looking to such submission, and other important franchise and public service questions that may from time to time come before the city government?

The courtesy of an immediate reply is requested. Respectfully,

FRANK PARSONS, Secretary.

Expect Answer To-day.

Professor Parsons expects to hear from all of the candidates to-day. Their answers will be published in the BOSTON AMERICAN so that the voters of the city will know how to act at the city primaries next Thursday.

CAME 1,000 MILES TO WED

Happily wed for over a week to a charming young woman who travelled alone over 1,000 miles to marry him, William McKillop, a prominent young business man of Brookline, has just apprised his friends of the fact that he is a benedict.

The wedding, which was performed at the parsonage of the First Presbyterian Church of Brookline, of which the groom is a leading member, on Thursday evening of last week, involves a pretty romance, starting when Mr. McKillop and his bride, who was Miss Bertha Frances Spry, were childhood playmates in St. John's, Newfoundland.

Mr. McKillop left that city and his childhood friend when but a young man, and coming here settled in Brookline, where he prospered in business. Becoming interested in Christian Endeavor work and being made corresponding secretary of a Boston society, he again got in touch with Miss Spry, who had become secretary of a branch at St. John's. The childhood friendship ripened into love and some time ago Mr. McKillop visited St. John's and got the promise of Miss Spry to become his wife.

When the time for the wedding came Mr. McKillop found he could not make the trip to St. John's and Miss Spry volunteered to come to Brookline, reaching there on Wednesday and being married the next evening. They are residing at No. 139 Brook street.

POLICE WILL SEND RUNAWAY GIRL HOME

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 10.—May Farrell, seventeen years old, acknowledged to the police here that she had run away from her home at No. 16 Brookford street, Cambridge, Mass. Captain Lawrence notified her father, John Farrell, through the Boston police, and turned the girl over to Miss Dennehy, probation officer.

EVA BOOTH ILL; CEREMONY OFF

Owing to the serious illness of Commander Eva Booth in New York, the laying of the corner stone of the People's Palace, which was to have taken place to-day, has been indefinitely postponed.

The officials at the local headquarters of the Salvation Army have received information from New York stating that Commander Booth may be compelled to undergo an operation, and that she would not be able to attend the celebration which was planned to take place here.

AMATEURS TO HAVE CHANCE AT COLUMBIA

So many ambitious young people were disappointed at not being able to test their public approval as to their histrionic ability at amateur night last week at the Columbia that Manager Farren has determined to give a repetition this evening after the regular performance. Aspirants are invited to leave their names at the box office.

TO RAISE $1,000,000 FOR LIBRARY FUND

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—H. C. Hovey of Boston is here to raise part of a fund for the establishment and maintenance of national headquarters for all public libraries. It is planned to raise $100,000 now, and to supplement this with $1,000,000 for permanent endowment.

SHERIFF RACES IN BIG AUTO TO FOIL LYNCHERS

Georgia Official Stops Hanging Just as Negro Is to Be Strung from Pole.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 10.—Sheriff Nelms of Fulton won a race against death by rushing in an auto at thirty miles an hour to the scene of what would have been the lynching of Jim Walker, a negro, who had been taken from the police by a mob. Walker had attacked a white woman.

The rope was already about the negro's neck and he was being dragged to a telephone pole when the sheriff arrived. Sheriff Nelms would probably have failed in his effort to rescue the negro if he had not been aided by Moore, the husband of the victim.

Husband to Spring Trap.

In return for Moore's assistance Sheriff Nelms promised that the husband should spring the trap when the negro is legally hanged, if he is hanged.

With his finger in the face of Walker, and with the mob surrounding him, Mr. Moore exclaimed, looking the prisoner squarely in the eyes: "You black wretch, I have been given the privilege and the pleasure of springing the trigger that will send you to death, and I propose to do it."

Without so much as flinching the negro replied: "I did not do that crime."

The negro has been chased persistently for three weeks. He was taken to Moore's home for identification. Mrs. Moore screamed, "He is the wretch," and fainted.

Negro May Die of Injuries.

In five minutes a great crowd gathered and took the negro from the officers. Mrs. Moore's two sons were in the crowd, making desperate efforts to shoot the negro.

A rope was put around the negro's neck and he was being dragged to execution, kicked and clubbed at every step by the crowd.

Some one telephoned Sheriff Nelms, and he sprang into an auto and raced full speed to the scene. The mob parted as the auto raced madly through it. When the sheriff reached the negro he seized the rope and pleaded with the mob that the law be allowed to take its course.

Moore then added his appeals to those of the sheriff, and the negro was saved. Walker was badly injured by the mob in its efforts to lynch him, and may die before his trial.

ATTACKED ON STREET BY APPENDICITIS

LOWELL, Nov. 10.—William Ripley of No. 34 Bowdoin street, Boston, succumbed to a sudden attack of appendicitis in Merrimac square and was removed to St. John's Hospital, where he was operated upon. He is in a very weak condition.

PATROL WAGON IS UPSET BY RUNAWAY

A runaway horse dashed into a police patrol wagon on Washington street, West Newton, overturning it, and then ran up Lincoln Park, smashing the carriage it was drawing against a tree. The occupants ratched up the vehicle and drove away, refusing to give their names to the police.

The patrol wagon upset was returning from a box call in Auburndale, and contained three officers besides a prisoner.

DO WOMEN OF BOSTON SMOKE, GAMBLE, DRINK?

Leaders of Gentler Sex Discuss Charges Made by Mrs. Russell Sage.

TEMPTATIONS OF THE IDLE

Boston women are discussing the accusation made by Mrs. Russell Sage against the feminine leisure class of gambling, drinking and smoking. Though none are prepared to say that the accusation does not apply to Boston at all, they do not feel that it is as marked here as in New York and other larger cities.

In an article on "Opportunities and Responsibilities of Leisured Women" in the November North American Review, Mrs. Sage says: "Drinking is indulged in to an appalling extent by women of the wealthy idle class, and their daughters are following in their footsteps.

"Rooms are hired and furnished in all parts of New York by fashionable women who do nothing but gamble there."

"The idle rich are no more vicious than the idle poor, but they are much more lacking in sympathy with one another."

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who is always pronounced and emphatic in her denunciation of any laxity on the part of women toward the social vices and who some time ago severely scored that element of women in the Back Bay who betray such tendencies, believes it a matter to be deeply deplored that the women of America should ever lay themselves open to any such criticism.

Imitation of Men.

Baroness de Bazus (Mrs. Frank Leslie), interested in all women at all times and in all places, and who is visiting in Boston, sees in the mannish style of dress and manners affected by the Boston girls of the Smart Set—a danger that might develop into a desire to imitate men in their vices.

Miss Dana Hirschler of Brookline, a social worker, and an honored member of the Parthia Club, says: "If there is such a tendency existing in Boston it has not come under my observation.

"My experience as a business woman and a social worker has not brought me into contact with the idle class—the class most subject to such temptations."

"No thoughtful person could, however, but deplore such laxity as Mrs. Sage claims exists both among the women of the idle rich and those of the idle poor.

"I agree with Mrs. Sage when she says that one of the most important movements of the day is the reawakening of woman, the building her up on a new basis of self help and work for others—and that that movement will set loose an amount of energy and talent that will revolutionize our social life. I have hope that the business which woman is being forced to in this age will make her more self reliant, more free from evil influences—not so easily tempted—that it will counteract evil tendencies and give them a sense of honor and dignity."

All Due to Idleness.

Miss Florette Vining, a leading club woman of Boston and a member of many patriotic societies, says:

"Mrs. Sage doesn't rap woman drinkers, smokers and gamblers half hard enough. Conditions are worse than she paints them—all due, as she says, to idleness.

"Women seem to have forgotten that their supreme mission in the world is motherhood and have grown restless and uneasy trying to find a substitute for it.

"Cigarette smoking is indulged in by women to a greater degree than most people realize. How can women expect to have health at fifty years of age, if they persist in doing these things? A broken down lot of women is the average in this generation. They have to be taken care of. The women have not the constitutions to withstand the ravages of drinking and cigarette smoking. The honest, upright woman, devoid of greed, seems to be scarce. They gamble for money and smoke and drink while doing it.

"The married women of the day are not in a position to give advice to their daughters who must, perhaps, go out into the world and be the butt of contempt for the actions of their mothers.

Children Must Suffer.

"These women bring scorn upon the good name of their ancestors and their children and children's children must suffer for their shortcomings. All this sort of thing tends to the ruination of the home, the most sacred of earthly things."

Dr. Gertrude Bodfish, president of the Woman's Physiological Institute, the oldest woman's club in America, and who is also a deep student of social conditions, from the slums up, suggests the "work cure" as a certain remedy.

"There is a class," she says, "but I believe that it is only a very, very small one, in Boston, given to drinking, smoking and gambling. Wherever these conditions exist—and I believe they exist to a greater extent in most other cities than Boston—they are an indication of mental disease superinduced by idleness. Women with no definite or serious object in life grow hopelessly restless, the same pleasures pall on them and there comes the abnormal craving for something new and exciting. They try the social vices, which prove the golden normally discomed return, often the better for their experience, to the sane wholesome and women who have not become too absorbed in the apple which turns to ashes on the lips.

YOUNG AVON WIFE MISSING

AVON, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Benjamin W. Butler, who left Tuesday afternoon ostensibly to go to Boston, has disappeared. Both Mr. and Mrs. Butler have been employed in a shop here for some time and each made good wages. The couple were married about six years ago. Mrs. Butler being somewhat younger than her husband. They have one boy, about five years old.

For some days past Mr. Butler has been confined to his home with sickness. He says that last Tuesday his wife, who is twenty-two years old, arranged with him to go to Boston to exchange for cash a gold watch, said to be valued at $50 and also to visit some friends in Cambridge. The jeweler whom she was to visit lived on West Canton street.

Mr. Butler cannot account for his wife's disappearance, as he says that he and she always lived happily together. He says that when his wife went away she wore a striped shirt waist and a black skirt, and over this a gray coat. She wore a brown hat with black plumes. She is about four feet tall and quite stout.

BLOW UP SAFE OPEN TEN YEARS

BAR MILLS, Me., Nov. 10.—Burglars broke into the postoffice, the jewelry store of Walter Coffin and the general store of J. W. Meserve, but obtained little plunder.

The safe in the general store was completely wrecked although it was not locked and had not been for ten years because of previous burglaries. It contained nothing of value.

The work is believed to have been done by a professional who was a stranger in town.

'ELIJAH' OFF TO PREPARE FOR LORD'S COMING

F. W. Sandford, Maine Fanatic, Sails on Yacht, Apparently for Jerusalem.

SAYS SECOND COMING NEAR

SHILOH, Me., Nov. 10.—Frank W. Sandford, leader of the "Holy Ghost and Us Bible School," and head of the "Church of the Living God," the pillar and ground of the truth," has left Shiloh, presumably for Jerusalem. The last heard from him he was in New York, and whether he has sailed for Europe or not is not known here. Mr. Sandford stopped a few days in Boston to attend to some business matters.

Shiloh has enjoyed a period of prosperity since Sandford was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs in the county case. Not since the period immediately following the first prosecutions against the Shiloh leader has the treasury been so full as it is now. Followers all over the world sent him money to pay the fine and costs, until he had enough to meet the requirements of the court a hundredfold.

Pray for Judge Who Fined Sandford

All of the money has been turned over to "The Kingdom," with a prayer of thanks for each gift and a long prayer for the whole amount.

Shilohites believe the Lord made his influence felt in the heart of Justice Emery, causing him to inflict a fine instead of a jail sentence for punishment. Prayers asking a blessing for Justice Emery are offered and forgiveness for the jury.

It is understood that Sandford intends to make his mission in Jerusalem a more important one, and that his business there this trip will be quite limited. It is also stated that he believed the return of the Lord to Jerusalem is near at hand. He and his followers are anxious to be as near as possible to the spot at the second coming.

"Do the people at Shiloh have all they want to eat now?" was asked of a disciple to-day. "Yes, and enough left over to carry them through the Winter?"

"Durham Lord's Headquarters."

"I don't know why they should not, as they have several thousand dollars in the treasury," was the reply.

"Does Mr. Sandford intend to make his headquarters in Jerusalem for the future?"

"While he has not stated definitely that he plans to make Mr. Gleason the head one at Jerusalem, there is nothing the same position there that Holland does at Shiloh. Mr. Sandford will spend his time establishing new missions and between Shiloh and Jerusalem."

"Will he make Jerusalem the principal headquarters of his following?"

"I think not, as the land selected Beulah Sandhill in Durham as the headquarters for the religious movement that the followers claim will evangelize the world, and he would not change it. But I understand that Mr. Sandford has received some new revelation from Christ's own mouth."

"Do you think he intends to stay out of the United States, or will he return then in regard to the indictments now standing against him cannot be taken?"

"No, sir; Mr. Sandford is not afraid to face trial any time the court wants him."

LEE HEIRESS ELOPES WITH EX-CONDUCTOR

Daughter of Berkshire Paper Maker Weds Choice of Heart Despite Father.

ARE MARRIED IN HARTFORD

LEE, Nov. 10.—Miss Lucilla J. Smith, daughter of Dewitt Smith, wealthy owner of one of the big paper mills here, and one of the most exclusive of exclusive Berkshire aristocrats, eloped to Hartford with Walter Scott Dickie, a conductor on the street car line between Pittsfield and Lee and was married to him there by the Rev. Ernest Dell' Miel, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church.

To say that society here is surprised is putting it mildly. It is dumbfounded.

Parental Objection to Match.

Miss Smith first met Dickie a few years ago, when he ran one of the first cars on the Berkshire railroad. He was a very gentlemanly young fellow and soon earned the good will of the townspeople. But Mr. Smith didn't like the popularity of the young fellow, especially because of the impression he had made upon his daughter. So he sent the girl to San Francisco, with instructions to forget Dickie. But she remembered, and one day came back with out telling her father.

The love of Miss Smith for Dickie was steadfast, and she resolved to marry the conductor, no matter what papa might say. The girl was driven out of her father's company, and it mattered little to either what people said.

They resolved to be married, but didn't care to have the ceremony here, so Dickie left the city some time ago and secured employment with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company in Hartford. Then he sent for his beloved.

Married in Hartford.

He went to Springfield and met her as she left the train from Pittsfield. Then the couple went together to Hartford. Dickie had the marriage license in his pocket. With this newsboard, trembling with excitement, he boarded a car that took them to the rectory of Trinity Church. There they were married, with two friends as witnesses.

The couple went to the Allyn House, and Dickie telegraphed to Mr. Smith in the town for congratulations. Mr. Smith is not pleased with the match, but when the quiry was made at his home he made the reply, "I have nothing to say."

Mrs. Dickie had received a college education and was accomplished in the ways of an accomplished young woman, pretty in the extreme. Conductor Dickie is a member with Pythagoras Lodge, and typified as a "good square chap. It is thought the couple will remain in Hartford.

For To-morrow's Game With the Speedy Quakers,

HARVARD ELEVEN IS FIT

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Thirty-two strong, the Harvard team arrived here this morning. The Harvard and Penn football elevens are in form for their annual big game, which will be played on Franklin Field to-morrow afternoon, before the largest crowd that ever attended a contest between the rival universities. Unusual interest has been caused by the threatene breaking off of athletic ties after this game, and the football public is unusually anxious to see this battle.

Penn ans played rough football this season, and there are those who are anxious to see what style of a game she will present against the Crimson warriors. It is generally admitted that if Pennsy should play anywhere near the "roughhouse" game that marred her play against Dartmouth, the Cambridge team will sever connections with her.

Moreover, if either eleven should play rough football it will help kill the game as it is now played. American college football is getting enough knocks on the head from every quarter these days, and a bloody battle on the part of Penn and Harvard to-morrow in the first big game of the year will do much to sound its death knell.

The Harvard team is here and in fine spirits. The band under the leadership of Jim Hurley, who gets in the game for the first time to-morrow, expects to defeat Penn in this game. This will be the first real test for Harvard, and should she go down to defeat, will despoil of landing victory over Dartmouth and Yale, her two next opponents.

Harvard has braced wonderfully lately. The offense is stronger than ever, while the defense, which hitherto has been the weakest point, has improved steadily.

Each eleven will have light signal practice this afternoon. This will be all the work either team will do until the game to-morrow.

The Harvard squad numbers thirty-two men who are:

Ends—Barrels, Hall, Leavy, Macdonald, Snyder, O'Brien.

Tackles—Brill, Squires, Spear, Knowlton, Montgomery, Fultz.

Guards—Burr, Kersberg, Peirce, McFadden.

Centres—Parker, White, Cunniff.

Quarterbacks—Starr, Newhall, Gilder, Lincoln.

Halfbacks—Hurley, Foster, Leonard, Wendell, Nichols, Sesmith.

Fullbacks—Lockwood, Guild, Carr.

Before they left Cambridge yesterday the men were given signal practice and the lineup was as follows:

Hall, left end; Brill, left tackle; Burr, left guard; Parker, centre; Kersberg, right guard; Squires, right tackle; Macdonald, right end; Gilder, quarterback; Foster, left halfback; Hurley, right half-back; Lockwood, fullback.

With the exception of left end, where Leavy will probably begin, and quarterback, where Starr will be, this will be Harvard's lineup in the game to-morrow.

The big surprise on the team is Phil Lockwood who, a week ago, was only one of the backs on the second team. Owing to the injuries to Carr, Foster and Guild he had to be pressed into service, and he has made good in all his work this week.

Captain Torrey Expects to Win

Pennsylvania is not considering a defeat, and bar accident I expect to celebrate a victory to-morrow, and thank the fellows for their splendid work in the face of impossible odds.—Captain Torrey.

Will Do Our Best, Says Murphy

We are going to play the last string out against Harvard, and if the Crimson wins it will not be because we failed to try. Our aim is to conclude a season of misadventure with a great triumph against greater odds.—Trainer Mike Murphy.

Rests With Team, Says Dickson

It all rests with the team and they have the grit and the sand to make them the equal of the Crimson hosts.—Coach Byron Dickson.

HARVARD-PENN GAME ON BOARD

The reproduction of the Harvard-Pennsylvania game on the Irwin football scoreboard at Mechanics building commences at 2 p. m. Saturday. A special wire connects Franklin Field with the hall, and all plays as fast as made are flashed over the wire and instantly shown.

A big delegation of Harvard graduates and students will be on hand, and the cheering in the hall sounds better than on the field.

The Pierian Sodality Orchestra and Glee Club (city Harvard students) will play and sing college airs.

BIFF ARTISTS WANT BOUTS.

"Biff" Dever, the fast little bantam of the peninsula district, would like to cross arms with any of the 115-pound boys in the fight game.

* * *

Young Ahern is anxious to get in the game again, and wants to meet Billy Griffin of South Boston. Ahern will also meet any of the 130-pounders around the Hub.

TORREY AND SHEBLE, STAR PENN PLAYERS

Captain Torrey predicts a hard game to-morrow, but still is confident that his team will defeat the Crimsons. He reports all of his men in first-class condition, and says if Harvard wins it will be because they are the superior eleven.

BROWN IS GIVEN STIFF PRACTICE FOR YALE GAME

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 10.—The last hard practice of the Brown team before the game with Yale at New Haven to-morrow was about the best of the week, as the showing made by the varsity was all that could be desired and if they put up as good a showing comparatively in the game with the Elis, there will be but little cause for complaint.

The preliminary practice consisted principally of punting, running back punts and tackling. As the tackling of the men in the previous games has not been quite up to the standard set by the coaches, particular attention was paid to this feature of the game and the men were given as hard work in this line as they have received this season. The players showed a decided improvement, as they tackled fast and hard and didn't seem to be afraid of getting hurt. They put more life into their work than is usual to practice, and this was probably due to the fact that the coaches kept right at them and urged them on to do their best. Deuble, Ross and Adams showed about the best form in getting their men, and it is those three men who have done the best tackling in the games past.

After the preliminary practice, two eleven-man teams were formed and some good, stiff signal drill. The work of the varsity in this line was unexpectedly good, the backs catching their signals quickly, starting fast, and carrying the ball well. After the men had warmed up to their work, the coaches put on the scrub and began practising signals, lined up for their daily game.

If the showing made in varsity is the sentiment of the coaches, a repetition of what they will do against Yale, well, the Elis will have to play their best game to win by a very large score. The offense and defense of the varsity was very strong and the scrub team could make no headway against it. Whenever the scrubs received the ball, they were forced to punt, as it was impossible to gain through.

On the other hand, when the varsity had the ball there was nothing to it but rushing down the field, as the defence work of the scrubs, while up to the average, was powerless against the plunging tactics adopted by the varsity. In fact the varsity used a line plunging almost exclusively according to the predictions of the fans. Yale will not score any more than five touchdowns, and many are of the opinion that the Elis will not score that.

YALE ELEVEN HAS HARDEST WORK OF YEAR

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 10.—There was some unique football on the Yale gridiron yesterday, when six coaches appeared in their old uniforms. They were all ghosts of their day in football. Oldest in years was W. W. Heffelfinger, '91. The others were: Sanford, the centre rush; E. T. Gilnes, the giant of all Yale guards; Ralph Bloomer, the big tackle; "Jack" Owsley, fullback, and Foster Rockwell, quarterback. Every coach on the field who was not in uniform was Frank Hinkey.

The coaches ordered the gates closed, and, having shut out the public, they began the hardest practice game of the season. Two twenty-minute halves were played, in which the coaches constantly went into the game to give the varsity practical lessons. All of the regular varsity backs entered the scrimmage except "Tad" Jones and Jack Cates. The latter ran through the signals, but Jones did not.

PRINCETON IS READY FOR CORNELL GAME

Special to the Boston American.

PRINCETON, Nov. 10.—The daily practice on University field was open to the undergraduates who attended in a body on the day to football. Oldest in years was W. W. Heffelfinger, '91. The others were: Sanford, the centre rush; E. T. Gilnes, the giant of all Yale guards; Ralph Bloomer, the big tackle; "Jack" Owsley, fullback, and Foster Rockwell, quarterback. Every coach on the field who was not in uniform was Frank Hinkey.

The coaches ordered the gates closed, and, having shut out the public, they began the hardest practice game of the season. Two twenty-minute halves were played, in which the coaches constantly went into the game to give the varsity practical lessons. All of the regular varsity backs entered the scrimmage except "Tad" Jones and Jack Cates. The latter ran through the signals, but Jones did not.

GREEN SHOULD WHIP AMHERST TEAM EASILY

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—The Dartmouth football team took its last hard practice of the week on alumni oval yesterday. It consisted entirely of signal work, and efforts to get the best speed possible, for with an almost entirely new backfield against Amherst to-morrow this will be their only hope. The team will leave for Amherst to-day on the 2 o'clock train, and will stay in Northampton at the Hampton House.

To all appearances Dartmouth should have no serious trouble winning the game, that is, if scores are any criterion of the abilities of the two teams. October 7 Dartmouth defeated Holy Cross by the score of 16 to 0, while on November 4 Holy Cross turned on Amherst and whipped them by 9 to 0.

NEW FIGHT CLUB FOR THE QUAKERS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—From good authority it was learned to-day that twenty-round fights will soon be held within easy reach of this city and New York.

The cleaners are that before the end of December at least one big fight will be pulled off.

Men whose aggregate wealth runs far into the millions are behind the scheme. The manager is William F. Roche, well known as a writer on pugilism, who, in his days, was amateur champion of America for hundreds of important fights.

"We hope to bring out Terry McGovern and Young Corbett as our first pair," said Roche. "We expect to have a great many New Yorkers over to see that contest, as well as those that follow. The architect assures us that he will need only twenty-four clear working days to complete the building, so it is practically certain that the club will be opened with a fine contest within five weeks."

These pictures were taken expressly for the Boston American. In the upper view Torrey is seen waiting to catch a punt, and in the lower one Sheble is about to boot the ball.

NELSON KNOCKED OUT BY CUPID

CINCINNATI, Nov. 10.—Cupid, with a series of heart jabs, has done what the best lightweights in the business have not been able to do to Battling Nelson. In plain words, Nelson is to be married, and he announced his engagement for the first time yesterday.

Miss Marguerite Ballangero is her name, and she lives in Fulcfas, Cal., a small town near San Francisco. She is only sixteen. Nelson wanted to marry her right away, but has agreed to wait until she grows up.

"You can't beat her for looks," said Nelson to-day before he went on for his performance at a local theatre. "She is simply the swellest little girl I've ever met. I've met others who have taken my fancy for a day or so, but never one whose picture lived in my heart ever since I met her. She is my choice.

"She's just the right girl for me, and she's going to have everything money can buy her from now on. I quit the ring and settle down in the home I'll build for her in my home town of Hegewisch, Ill.

"I wanted to bring her East with me this time, but she said to wait until she grows up, and you can lay odds that I'll wait for her."

CAHILL AFTER DELMONT.

Young Cahill of Roxbury will meet Albert Delmont at 110 pounds. He has beaten such boys as Johnny Lynch, Johnny Sheehan, Kid Barrish and has draws with Rouse O'Brien and Delmont.

CAHILL WILL PLAY AGAINST SYRACUSIANS

WORCESTER, Nov. 10.—The team which will represent Holy Cross college against Syracuse University at Syracuse to-morrow was selected by Coach Cavanaugh last evening after the usual practice and will be as follows:

Left end, Connor; left tackle, Carney; left guard, McCarthy; centre, Cahill; right guard, Pollett; right tackle, Lynch; right end, Naughton; quarterback, Dodwell; right halfback, Carrigan; left halfback, Riley; fullback, Scanlon.

Cahill, who has been out of the game the past week, and who it was feared would be unable to play to-morrow, reported for practice yesterday afternoon.

TUFTS ELEVEN STILL PURSUED BY HARD LUCK

Special to the Boston American.

MEDFORD, Nov. 10.—The practice of the Tufts team yesterday afternoon shows that the "hard luck" spell has not passed over, for in practice Carl Jones, the star half, and Cook, the regular left tackle, both received wrenched knees, which will make it impossible for them to play in the University of Maine game to-morrow. Lewis has also been laid off with a sprained ankle since the game with Wesleyan last Saturday, but was put in in Jones's place.

Coach Nolan gave the men some hard practice against the scrub, however, changing Hall from centre to tackle and putting Reynolds in the snapper back position.

ENGLISH GAME IN STADIUM TO-MORROW

With no varsity game in Cambridge to-morrow Harvard men are taking a great deal of interest in the match between Montrose College and the All-Halifax team, which is to be played in the Stadium that day by invitation of the Harvard athletic committee.

President Elliot, it is said, has signified his intention of attending the game in order to see how the English article compares with the American game.

LANKY BOB SAYS HE WILL PUT HIS FAMOUS LEFT HOOK ON O'BRIEN'S JAW

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Just listen to Lanky Bob Fitzsimmons as he talks about his coming fight with Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, and if you hear half he says you'll be satisfied that the battle scheduled for San Francisco on December 20 or 21 will be the greatest fought since Ruby Robert's last appearance.

One thing Fitz's talk shows for sure, and that is that he has taken on this fight for revenge as much as for the coin that he will get from it. He has an old score to settle with the boxer he calls the "flopping four flush," and nothing but the sight of O'Brien being counted out will satisfy the freckled bruiser.

In the six-round bout that Philadelphia O'Brien made such a good showing against Fitz that he got most of the bouquets the newspapers handed out the next day. That was like hitting Fitz with a knobbed club, and he has never got over the stain on his pugilistic honor.

Fitz says he has it on O'Brien at any stage, and that it won't take him long to prove it. Here's what Bob thinks of O'Brien and of the coming scrap:

"You can just bet I was anxious to clinch a fight with that jumping four flush from Philadelphia. He cannot fight. I mean he is afraid to meet a man in the middle of the ring and wallop, letting the better man get the coin.

"All he can do is to run away. He won't be able to do that forever, and, as one fight in 'Frisco is to go to a finish, the time is coming when he will meet his finish.

"I won't be satisfied until I see the fellow crawl through the ropes, for he is apt to slide out of the go at any time. To get the idea that he is up against it he will do a disappearing act that would put Lafayette's in the shade.

"This fight looks pretty easy to me. I am ready to admit that O'Brien is a good boxer and all that, but it's a fighter he should be to have a chance with me.

"I figure he will last a good many rounds and that the fight will be hot, but the further it goes the slower he will get, the less he'll resemble a jack rabbit, and then his time will be at hand.

"I am ready to predict that I will rock him to sleep with a rap on the jaw. That left hook of mine that usually sent the Cornish mule, will be there, and it's the first one that he'll see, but to know he is being counted out will suit me. I don't want him to quit or have his seconds toss in a sponge. I owe that boy a licking—a good one—and I am going to pay my debts.

"There never was a second that he had it on me in our bout in Philadelphia, but he was the fazee-haired boy there, and his friends gave it to him on a golden platter. That has to be squared—and it's going to be.

"I will start for 'Frisco in a few days, and will train on the outskirts of the town. I am in good shape now, and the time I have left before the fight is more than enough for me to get right in. My hands are O. K. They were bad for a long time after my last fight, but I have taken good care of them, and they are all right once more.

"As soon as I have shoved O'Brien into the discard I am going to fight any one that wants a crack at me. Marvin Hart, who says he won the heavyweight title by licking Jack Root, a middleweight, can come on if he really wants a chance to wear the crown Jeffries let go.

"I am the real title holder. Every one knows that, next to Jeffries, I am the best fighter in the world, and that when Jim gave up the title naturally came to me. Hart has no right to it, and I don't think he ever will earn it, unless he catches me some dark night and hits me with a blackjack.

"It's a cinch he cannot win it. He would be even easier than O'Brien, and if he wants me to prove this let him sign articles to fight me within a month after I lick O'Brien."

MANY SMART NOVELTIES IN FUR STYLES

New Designs Show Some Charming Surprises

THE newest importations of fur models, received by a Boston house this week, reveal some charming new creations.

Every woman knows that furs are to be more popular than ever this year and the latest new designs in jackets and capes and coats are nothing short of charming.

The sable coat, shown in Figure 1, can be procured for about $600. The skins are of a beautiful quality and color, and the cape would be equally suitable as a wrap for day or evening wear.

It is made in a deep, full shape, with a bordering fringe of tails and paws, and very handsome long stole ends, in front, each end finished with four full tails. The collar can be worn turned up or down, as preferred, and is equally becoming under either aspect, while at the back it is arranged so that it forms a double shoulder cape.

In Figure 2 is shown the value of the contrasted charms of sealskin and chinchilla. These are displayed to the best advantage in a sealskin coat of a most becoming three-quarter length, with a large collar and revers of chinchilla.

This coat has a slightly pouched front, and long graceful basques. The sleeves are of a new shape, with plenty of fulness on the shoulder, and gauntlet cuffs made also in sealskin.

A smart little bolero coat in electric seal forms the subject of the illustration shown in Figure 3. This coat, is made in a very becoming shape and is beautifully cut. It looks equally well worn open or closed, and it is trimmed most effectively with a bordering of wide black silk braid, arranged here and there in long, narrow points, with a diamond-shaped insertion of emerald green velvet, adorned with tiny buttons. This little coat is fastened with dull gold buttons in a very much larger size, and is altogether a most attractive garment.

Among the other fur novelties of this season are bisqued coats in caracule and in dyed squirrel, and handsome full-length motor coats, made in a double-breasted shape, in sheared electric seal.

A beautiful stole is made in the form of a straight board of stone marten and is trimmed as effectively with four handsome tails. On either side of each tail there are two paws, forming eight paws in all, adding greatly to the effective appearance of the scarf as a whole. This scarf can be worn like a straight stole, or with one end thrown over the shoulder.

Another long straight scarf which can also be worn as a "thrower" or "finger," as they are sometimes called, is worn around the neck, is made in mock-ermine.

Another fur stole is made in mink marmot, with three tails to finish each end of the stole, and two heads and four tails arranged across the front, thus making a handsome trimming of ten tails in all.

A Free Turkey a Day for Thanksgiving Dinner Menus

Send in One Recipe with Menu and Win a Prize.

TURKEYS are roosting high this year, the marketmen say.

Nevertheless, every New England home must have one for November 30. Governor Douglas didn't say so in his proclamation, but custom has so decreed, and the decree is inviolable.

The Thanksgiving table without the bird of the day is like home without a mother.

Here's your chance to get your bird free. The BOSTON AMERICAN will give away one a day from now until Thanksgiving.

Somebody is going to win a fat, plump Vermont turkey every day. It may as well be you.

Send in your best Thanksgiving dinner menu and compete for the prize. One recipe must accompany each menu. This is imperative.

The conditions are few. Here they are:

Write on one side of the paper only.

Send your full name and address.

Send the dinner menu and the recipe for one dish.

Address it to the "Turkey Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 82 Summer street, Boston, Mass."

From the answers sent in the best one will be selected by a board of competent judges. The day before Thanksgiving a good turkey will be delivered FREE OF CHARGE to every winner.

These turkeys will be supplied by the well-known Hallowell Provision Company, 66-68-70 Blackstone street, and the prize birds will be picked from their extensive Thanksgiving stock.

Here are the best of the menus received yesterday. The prize winner will be announced to-morrow.

Oysters on the Half-Shell.
Roast Turkey, Giblet Sauce.
Cranberry Jelly. Celery.
Cauliflower. Mashed Potatoes.
Boiled Onions.
Mince Pie. Squash Pie.
Plum Pudding, Hard Sauce.
Nuts. Raisins. Fruit.
Coffee.

This was the best dinner I ever ate. I prepared it myself and served it myself, and everyone who partook of it claimed it was the best he ever ate.

PLUM PUDDING

Two pounds seeded raisins, two pounds cleaned currants, one-half pound sliced citron, two pounds bread crumbs, two pounds chopped suet, six eggs beaten, two pounds brown sugar, one tablespoon mace, one tablespoon allspice, one tablespoon cinnamon, one tablespoon salt, milk. Mix fruit thoroughly then add eggs and milk, a little at a time, so as not to make too wet. Boil eight hours.

MRS. E. J. ROONEY,
No. 178 Massachusetts avenue, East Lexington.

Turkey Editor:

In submitting the following menu I want to say that it is not designed for fashionable restaurants, or for people who desire rich entrees, wine or pink ice cream, but a good old-fashion family dinner "such as mother used to make" in the country, where it is not always easy to get fresh fish, and where best to appreciate the dinner is in an old-fashioned farm house on a cold, gray day, with flurries of snow and a bright fire in an open fireplace.

Oysters in Shell.
Cream of Celery Soup.
Chicken Pie, American Style.
Celery.
Roast Turkey. Cranberry Sauce.
Boiled Sweet Potatoes. Boiled Onions.
Hubbard Squash. Mashed Potatoes.
New Russet Cider.
Mince Pie. Apple Pie. Pumpkin Pie.
Baked Indian or
Old-Fashioned Plum Pudding.
Nuts and Raisins. Crackers and Cheese.
Coffee.

RECIPE FOR CHICKEN PIE

Cut into pieces two fresh killed chickens, boil in enough water to cover until tender, adding when half done two teaspoonsful of salt. Take out chicken, keep warm, and thicken liquid with two tablespoonsful of flour and fresh butter rubbed together, and boil five minutes. Line a deep earthen baking dish, leaving two inches over the side to turn up over top crust with paste made from one-quarter pound of flour, two teaspoonsful baking powder, a little salt and a cup of butter; mix as biscuit; take half and roll one-quarter inch thick for lining. Put in chicken, pour over gravy, cover with other crust, with a large hole in centre for steam to escape. Wet the edge and fold over the upper crust and press firmly. Spread soft butter over top, and also an egg beaten to a light froth, and bake in slow oven till a rich golden brown.

MRS. K. J. REMICK.
No. 15 St. James avenue, Boston.

Chicken Soup. Celery Soup.
Roast Turkey. Cranberry Sauce.
Chicken Croquettes.
Green Peas. Escalloped Oysters.
Squash. Boiled Onions. Celery.
Sweet Potatoes. Mashed Potatoes.
Indian Pudding, Hard Sauce.
Cranberry Pie. Mince Pie. Pumpkin Pie.
Cheese.
Tea. Coffee. Milk.
Fruit. Sweet Cider. Nuts.
Candy.

INDIAN PUDDING

One quart sweet milk, when it comes to a boil add one cup of Indian meal and let it cool until it thickens. Take off, add one cup molasses, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon ginger; then add two quarts cold milk. Bake slowly three or four hours.

"CONVICT 99"

A PRISONER FOR LOVE

CHAPTER XLVI.—Continued.

"I have proof," Laurence replied, "but I scarcely needed it. I had suspected you long ago—in the very midst of the sufferings you had instigated a mad path for with the money that had been declented by love to my relief."

"He has seen her!" Vickers said to himself with a curse. His hope shriveled within him.

Laurence went on steadily:

"In the solitude of the punishment cell I looked back over the past.

Again a Prisoner

"I saw things in their true light, and I guessed the part you had played. I was there then with cold-blooded purpose, but there should be no more power for evil left in your false body. But now that I am here I am calm, as you see. I leave my vengeance to God. Justice is all I shall seek. But that I will have. Justice myself, justice for the dead, punishment for the slaughter of blood."

A convulsion passed over Vickers's face. Laurence noted it, and his fixed gaze made the guilty man shrink until his lithe form seemed to diminish in stature beside the noble figure of his accuser.

"For the slaughter of blood," repeated Laurence, in a tone of terrible clearness, "Ralph Vickers, I know you to be a false friend, a perjurer and an embezzler. And I believe you to be also a murderer."

Vickers was choking with rage and terror. With a supreme effort he wrenched himself away.

"As I to be the victim of a madman's delusions?" he cried in a voice shrill with fear. His right hand was fumbling in his pocket. Suddenly wheeling round, he blew a policeman's whistle.

In an instant, as it seemed, a crowd gathered about them, with two constables in its midst. Laurence Craig was conscious only of a pressing mass of human beings, of an uproar, in which the voice of Vickers rose above the rest, calling out disjointedly, "Take him—that man there! He's an escaped convict! He's Laurence Craig, who was sentenced to penal servitude for life for the murder of Charles Kesteven two years ago." And then he felt himself seized by the arm and dragged away.

Flight was impossible. Resistance would be useless and degrading. He might have said, "This man who accuses me is Charles Kesteven's murderer, not I." But no one would believe a convict's word. And the policemen knew him. Their eyes denied recognition, one of them was the officer who had dressed him almost daily for months, spot on the night when his life's tragedy had begun.

In a moment the handcuffs were upon him. He was again a prisoner.

CHAPTER XLVII.
Remanded

ON the evening of that day of his capture, Laurence Craig found himself again at Jedson Prison. His dream of liberty was over.

He was plunged once more into the abyss of captivity and shame.

His condition now was even worse than it had been before his escape. Already his hair was cropped, and his beard and mustache were shaved off. The cell that he occupied was a punishment cell, ominous of what he would later on be called to endure, and he was once more dressed in the unsightly garb of a convict.

He knew that severe punishment awaited him. He would not now escape the lash as he had done at Grimley, for his physical condition no longer afforded a plea for exemption or even delay. But he braced up his courage to confront the threatened indignity. He would struggle against it to the utmost. In spite of the misfortune of his re-arrest he was not utterly unhappy.

In those hours of liberty he had done much. He had seen Geraldine, and cleared away forever whatever doubts of him had been implanted in her mind. She had been saved in the very hour when harassed, desolate, fearing even that he was dead, she had stood on the brink of a despair as great as his own had been before the prospect of freedom had come to save him from madness.

Their love had been strengthened, their faith restored.

Henceforth, whatever happened, the evil influence of Ralph Vickers would have no power to blind her. That short interval of association with the life of the free world had also enabled him to set in vigorous motion investigations which would terminate in the speedy establishing of his complete innocence.

He was, however, in great doubt as to what Vickers would now do. He bitterly regretted the unexpected meeting with him, and, above all, the accusation which he had uttered in the heat of blood.

He feared lest Vickers should take the alarm and seek to escape danger by means of flight.

Probably his action would depend upon the extent of what he might suppose Laurence to have done and said during his interval of liberty. If he believed that those menaces of an avenging justice were mere empty words, or at most intentions, which Craig's re-arrest had completely nipped in the bud; above all, if he believed that Geraldine and her lover had not met; then he might be bold enough to carry on his scheme with partially unmoved confidence.

Mr. Lucas, although now convinced of Vickers's unworthiness, was at the present debarred from taking any action against him.

An Awkward Position

The old merchant was placed in a very awkward position, for not only was Vickers now junior partner in the firm, but he had, during his senior's long illness, been entrusted with the entire control of the business.

Vickers, therefore, with everything quiet around him, might relapse into his former state of imagined security, and thus, owing to himself at his victim's defeat, remain within reach of the law.

On the morning of Craig's recapture his appearance had caused considerable astonishment to the Hampstead lodger and families. They identified him beyond a doubt as Laurence Craig. Yet it was manifestly incredible that so important a criminal could have escaped from a penal settlement without proclamation of the fact being made to the police throughout the country.

Upon searching him, however, a full explanation of his being thus actually at large was found in the ticket-of-leave bearing the name of another convict. A succession of telegrams between Hampstead, Marlborough street and Jedwood soon made it impossible for Laurence to evade his fate.

The officer at Jedwood, into whose hands Laurence was given, chanced to be his old friend Walter Hewitt.

Although amazed at the early return of the man who had been so confident of clearing himself, the warder did not speak until he was alone with Laurence in his cell.

"So you didn't manage it after all, lad?" he remarked then. "I'm real sorry to see you back again. T'other chap'll be sorry, too. He's a good sort, is Lacy, but happen he'll get put in chokey for helpin' you. As for yourself, lad, I wouldn't like to be in your shoes when the director comes down from London."

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

CHAPTER III.
A Queer Diversion

JACK was appalled by the great numbers of the savages, but it was not his habit to lose his nerve.

He had plenty of ammunition and he was a dead shot.

The long line of half-clad headhunters swept out of the woods like wildfire, but suddenly their chief, a small old fellow, raised a shout.

The crowd paused and at last came to a full stop, while a clutter of jabbering ran up and down the line.

Jack quickly perceived what the matter was.

They saw no enemy to attack.

He knew that in a second the whole crowd would be swallowed into a swift pursuit, and he was determined to prevent this if possible.

Crouching low behind the land crab, so as to keep himself well out of sight, he suddenly let go with a rapid succession of shots.

Every bullet found its mark.

Six men in different parts of the line dropped to the sand.

Immediately there was the wildest confusion.

About each gathered an excited group of natives, until Jack, with perfect command of his weapon, sent a few more shots into the line.

The chief had been busy looking for the man who had made this unexpected and deadly attack on his tribe, but he looked in vain.

From behind his crustacean bivouac Jack watched him.

Suddenly the old man's face took on a look of terror, and he pointed excitedly to the crab behind which Jack was stationed.

It was overhung with a little cloud of smoke.

Jack waited an instant to see what would be the effect.

A Regular Rout.

The old man shouted an order and motioned excitedly toward the crab.

His words produced the most profound sensation.

From where he lay Jack could see the wave of fear that swept over the line.

He did not know that the crabs were endowed, in the imaginations of these savages, with terrible powers, and that he was unconsciously enhancing this superstition.

No one knew that his life depended on acting quickly, and taking advantage of the confusion he sent a rapid succession of bullets whizzing over each other, and fighting furiously for their lives those very natives had fled in wild disorder to the woods.

Only three of them left their dead and wounded, unregarded.

The battle was terrific.

When the first man reached the edge of the clearing he stumbled and fell forward, rolling on top of him, resembled a scrimmage in a football game.

At last one of the combatants managed to get himself clear, and he was instantly pinned to the ground by a dozen of his fellow hunters.

Then once the latter learned that it was not fire vomiting land crabs, but white men who had killed their chief, they would have vengeance.

To the Rescue.

Jack looked up and down the beach.

The sand lay between two rocky headlands, which jutted out into the sea, and Jack decided that it might be possible to escape from the most immediate peril by this ship.

Steel agreed with him, and without spending any time counting their dead enemies, they left the bodies exposed along the beach and were soon clambering over the volcanic rocks that formed the promontory.

To Jack's great delight he saw a steamer riding far out to sea.

But a second look filled him with wonder.

The boat was not the Harvey.

Her lines were entirely different, and, although she was built like a yacht, her rig did not in the least resemble that of the boat they knew so well, and instead of one funnel she had two.

"A boat's a boat, at any rate," said Steel. "It's safe to bet that she isn't loaded with cutthroats like these fellows."

"True enough," said Jack, "we'll try to signal her."

The beach, rock as it was, was filled with little caves, and each of these was strewn with driftwood.

Jack inspected that nearest at hand, and at last found a sapling, slender, and some twenty feet in length.

Steel stripped off his blue flannel shirt, and soon a signal flag was waving in the breeze.

Presently the signal was answered from the ship.

Steel waved "Help" in the merchant code, and the castaways were delighted to see that the ship answered "all right."

Vastly relieved they sat down to wait, keeping an eye on the shoreward line they should be attacked by a crowd of less superstitious natives.

With the Enemy

They could see the pirate boat making off in the opposite direction, and they felt sure that the purpose of the pirates was to warn the head hunters, if possible, before the ship could come to the rescue.

They were, therefore, the more delighted when they saw a boat put out from the yacht and manned, dancing over the waves in their direction.

Presently she was within hailing distance.

Jack was surprised to see that the coxswain was a Malay, but he was smartly rigged out in a spick and span uniform, which argued that he was serving an American or European master.

The boat put them on board, and after a few words of inquiry the coxswain, who commanded a crew of little brown men, ordered them put aboard and brought them safely alongside the yacht.

The craft bore the name of Sea Dog, and was a trim, well fitted little vessel, shining with new white paint and polished brass and metal work.

The newcomers were taken to the starboard gangway and escorted on board.

There were no officers to welcome them, and aside from a few Filipino sailors no sign of life on the deck.

Few words were spoken.

The coxswain said nothing on the journey out, and said nothing now, merely beckoning Jack and Steel to enter a handsomely furnished little cabin.

Jack had barely taken a seat on the locker when he sprang up with a cry.

"Look at that!" he said.

On the wall around the room was a row of plates, each bearing the words: "W. Hunston, Yacht Hawk."

"We're on Hunston's boat," he said.

A Simple House Gown

3058

No. 3,058—There is no part of the wardrobe wherein the up-to-date woman takes so much real pleasure as in the comfortable house gown. It is easily slipped into for breakfast, is graceful and becoming enough to receive the early caller, and quite the garb for dispensing the little duties which await every housewife at the outset of the day. The model shown is a perfect example of absolute simplicity. It closes in front with a hem or her pleat, while a leather or suede belt girdles the waist. The skirt is a seven-gored one, gathered at the waist and finished with a deep gathered flounce, which may or may not be used. The skirt should be made short enough to escape the floor if the best use is to be derived from the garment. The neck is finished with a round turned down collar, which is comfortably low, flingham, percale, lawn or madras may serve as material for the medium size 8½ yards of 36-inch material are needed.

Messrs. J. Falkson & Co., 42 SUMMER STREET, BOSTON,
Makers of the Finest Ready-to-Wear Clothing in Boston

This firm in dissolving their co-partnership decided to convert their stock into cash to effect an immediate settlement and turned to us as the largest outlet for their production. As a result their entire made-up stock is here to be sold at prices that will make the most indifferent of men sit up and take notice.

Here at the season's very height we shall offer for two days the greatest $10.80 and $15.00 values in Overcoats and Suits ever known in Clothing Circles, and when we say $10.80 and $15.00 values we do not mean what folks usually have in mind at these prices, we mean much more than that.

We mean that we shall offer qualities at these prices that can't be matched for half as much again—nearly double what we ask. The $10.80 values, for instance, mean the character and the fine tailoring that goes with a $15.00 or $18.00 price ticket in every store in town, and the $15.00 values the qualities that sell for $20.00 and $25.00 everywhere. This letter of Messrs. J. Falkson & Co. tells its own story.

Men's Fancy Long Overcoats, $10.80

Why Put Off Your Christmas Shopping?

Why Not Learn Wisdom from the Past and Make Your Purchases Early This Year?

The holidays are coming. It is but a little more than six weeks to Christmas. Three weeks from yesterday is Thanksgiving Day, and then will begin the usual period of holiday shopping.

If you are the one who makes the family Christmas purchases you will remember some unpleasant things that happened last year, and the year before that.

You did your shopping the last two weeks before Christmas.

The stores were so crowded that you had hard work making your way through them.

Even with the extra force of clerks with which the merchants tried to handle the extra crowds you had great difficulty, at times, in getting waited upon, because of the thousands and hundreds of thousands of other shoppers.

You came home each day tired and exhausted, and with fewer purchases made than you had expected.

Toward the last of the holidays you found your time getting so short that you purchased gifts you really did not want—because you couldn't find minutes enough in the day to search for the things you really DID want.

You arrived at the stores late and purchased from stocks that had been depleted—those who arrived early had had their pick of them.

Then, after it was all over, you found that in your haste you had omitted something for somebody.

All this is true, isn't it? If it isn't true of YOU it is true of thousands of other readers.

Taking lesson from the past is one of the surest symptoms of wisdom. Why don't you do differently this year?

Suppose you were to plan your Christmas presents NOW, if you have not already done so.

Suppose you were to begin to purchase them NOW, taking the next four weeks in which to buy, instead of the last two before the holiday, finding complete stocks and smaller crowds in the stores.

You would get the bulk of your shopping done and still have the last two weeks in which to find the few things you had forgotten.

You would be better satisfied. Those to whom you give gifts would be better satisfied. Probably the storekeepers would be better satisfied.

At no time more than during the period just before Christmas is this old maxim true:

"PROCRASTINATION IS THE THIEF OF TIME."

They Do These Things Differently in France

An Automobilist Who Killed a Child Sent to Jail, Fined $120 and Made to Pay $4,000 to the Family by One Judge

They do enforce the law in Paris. And the law is quickly enforced in Paris and all France because a great man, whose breathing made the world hold its breath, reformed the laws. Napoleon cut away precedent and simplified the methods of bringing suits to trial.

In this country, when we cut loose from England, we did not give up the English methods of trying law suits. Since the Revolution the law in America has become more complex, whereas in England the people have forced quicker procedure and easier methods of getting at results.

The reason is that in this country lawyers make laws and then construe them.

In England the lawyer is not given prominence in Parliament. The people make the laws and the application of the law is left to the lawyers.

Next to the curse of the Privileged in this country the greatest evil is the prominence given to lawyers in legislatures, councils and in Congress.

In Paris in April Elliott F. Shepard, whose father married in the Vanderbilt family and ran a newspaper with a text from the Bible at the head of the editorial column, ran his automobile over a child and killed it.

Mr. Shepard did not intend to kill the child. He was in a hurry and the child was in his way.

He was arrested, tried, and now, in five months, the case is through all the courts. All the "pull" his rich friends could exert in his behalf has been exerted.

The judge has sentenced him to prison for three months. He must pay the state a fine of $120. He must pay to the family of the child $4,000.

Now the executive cannot pardon Mr. Shepard. In France the executive has no jurisdiction over the courts.

All these things were settled in one trial by one judge.

In this country Mr. Shepard would have been indicted for manslaughter and would have been tried in one court.

But the family, to recover damages, would be compelled to sue in a civil court.

In America when a man commits a crime the State puts him on trial for his injury to THE STATE ALONE.

In France the court tries him for his injury to the State and to the family of his victim.

In France there are more automobiles than in America. The machines go faster there than here. For one person killed in France fifty are killed in America.

The small loss of life in France is due to the fact that when the law is broken there is no escape from punishment.

RUSSIA AND STARVATION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am a constant reader of your worthy paper and am very much pleased that you sympathize with the Russian people. Many might think that the Russian government has a bad lot to deal with, a class of common, unworthy, ignorant working people.

But who is to blame for the present conditions in Russia? The hard struggling and working class, oppressed for so many years, robbed of every chance and opportunity to live, work hard day and night for nothing else but dry bread. The rest of their pay goes as taxes to the government in order to keep the Russian aristocrat in luxuries and wealth. Who is to blame for it?

I can hear some of our free Americans say that the common people ought to suffer the consequences for allowing the Russian autocracy to oppress them.

Do they know that one protesting word means life in terrible Siberia, or even death?

The Russian workingman is hurt, but not allowed to cry. It is impossible for them to stand it any longer. They tried everything; they begged and pleaded first, without avail, so they demand it now. They have a right to live.

As times were getting worse and hunger oppressed harder the mob became more desperate. They had nothing to lose, and the Russian workingman might as well die from the Czar's sword as by hunger.

Nothing else but bread the poor people are struggling for!

Now, free Americans, who do you think is guilty—the starving workingman or the great Russian autocrat?

ALBERT SCHWARTZ.

1—MR. GOODFELLOW—But I tell you, Snooks, you MUST come down to the club to-night; we're going to have a hot time.
MR. SNOOKS—Really I don't see how I'm going to manage it. Mrs. Snooks is onto my excuses. But I'll try, at any rate.

2—MRS. SNOOKS (that evening)—NO, John Snooks, you shall not go to the club this night. NO! NO! NO! NO!
MR. SNOOKS (aside)—Gee, THAT settles it. But let me think. By jove! I have an idea. My only hope!

3—MR. SNOOKS—Oh, very well. I only had a sort of presentiment that if I went to the club to-night I would be introduced to that Mr. Tanner, the great wholesale dealer in furs, and perhaps he might become very friendly with me. Of course, it is of great value to know such men——

4—MR. SNOOKS (continuing)—because some day I might wish to buy you a new set of furs, and I could get twice as fine a set for the money——
MRS. SNOOKS—Oh, John, forgive me for being so quick. Certainly you can go to the club. It is your duty to meet such men.

It Is Far More Important to Make the Most of What Is, Than to Brood Over What Has Been

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal Examiner

A WOMAN talked to me for weary hours of the wonderful past of her family. Such achievements, such wealth, such power as had been enjoyed by her ancestors.

She showed me pedigrees that ran so far back into the dim ages of history that the telephone bell sounded profane when it interrupted her discourse.

Meantime the woman was doing nothing with her own life.

She did not feel it necessary; indeed she would have thought it a bit vulgar for one of such illustrious lineage to be active.

She was happily occupied in retrospection.

Another talked to me of the wonderful things she was going to do.

Such plans, such hopes, such dreams. All beautiful and interesting, but she had talked in this same vein for ten years, and nothing was yet begun.

She does not believe in haste, she says.

She thinks one should formulate plans fully in the mind before undertaking them. And she is very happy in her anticipation of what she intends to do that she has no time to really do things.

Meanwhile to-day is here and it is all we have.

Our ancestors sleep.

The future takes care of itself, according to the way we take care of the present.

Do something yourself to-day.

If your ancestors achieved great things put their achievements to shame by your own. If they were failures and vagabonds, cover their ignoble names with the lustre of your own.

If you plan great deeds for the future show a beginning now.

Do something before you sleep to prove that you have a right to such hopes.

YOU and To-day, a soul sublime,
And this great pregnant hour of time,
With God between to bind the twain—
Go forth, I say, Attain, attain!

An Adventure in a Dining Room

By Henri Pene Du Bois

AT the dial of the tall mahogany clock, in my dining room, fishing boats cut out of zinc swing in front of a port, painted on fajence. The sails orange-colored, a their play constant in the cycle of the Roman figures under silver needles.

Above grimaces the golden little devil. Seated on a barrel, he holds a trident where a bunch of grapes is suspended. His horns go through a wreath of vine leaves. He is made like Cupucelo's angel, playing the guitar at Venice.

When I came into the dining room last evening, a glass of red wine and a purple tulip appeared on the table in front of the clock. The little golden devil said: "I brought them there from the countries where the boats on the dial go."

I know that these boats have rolled without advancing in the same port with ten rowers, for ages, but I am content with little, having seen many things which are inexplicable and others which ought not to be explained.

"You may take the tulip or the wine," said the devil.

"The choice is easy," I replied. "I recognize the tulip. It is named 'Golden Cloth.' It was celebrated in France since the time of Louis XVI. M. Buchoux reproduces it in his 'Etrennes de Flore,' a beautiful album which appeared in 1781, at Paris, Rue de la Harpe, at the Authors."

"It is true!" cried the statuette.

I looked at the wine. "It is port," said the statuette. "It was born in a comet's year. Edward VII. Emperor of India, never drank such a wine." Then a voice which was sweet as the murmur of a brook rose, and I knew that it was the voice of the tulip. It said:

"I come of a large garden bordered by light and clear houses. Often women whose foreheads were decked with jewels as are those of idols, caressed me with their graceful hands." I smiled to the tulip, but the wine said:

"The coast where my vine grows over a trellis faces a sea of azure, your ancestors paid for me my weight in gold. I was the partition that inspired them when they repulsed Packenham and his star-soldiers at the Battle of New Orleans." The tulip said:

"In the light of my corolla, 'Perneus,' my companion, is palely pink; the 'Beautiful Holland Girl' resembles a jar of honey; the Countess de Feligonc is dressed in the fashion of Baton Rouge, the 'Countess d'Angivillers' is an old madrigal." The wine said:

"I was made of pieces of sunlight fallen into mud vineyards. I am the life and the blood of the earth. The tulip asks to be given by you to Elfred, who is seven years of age, has blue eyes, and loves flowers. Do not take the tulip for that or for anything else; take me; I shall give to you power."

The little golden devil above the clock tinkled while I drank.

PLEA FOR THE BROWN DERBY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Can you spare the space for a short, impassioned plea for the brown derby? It's a tremendously abused garment and no mistake. Grievance to say, its traducers are to be found mainly among the fair sex. I have yet to meet the woman who would not, if given a fraction of an opportunity, attack the brown dip with vehement volubility. A brown "bowler" is to a woman like a red rag to a cow. And for no reason except that it doesn't harmonize with her sense of the fitness of things.

To any reasonable, rational human being it would seem the logical, sensible headgear for this dusty clime. That is, as logical and sensible as the derby monstrosity could possibly be. Besides being light and airy and generally pleasing to the eye, it doesn't show the tiny particles of dust that stand out like sun spots on the black tongue.

Like the porcupine, it has many fine points to recommend it. Yet we timorous ones who think we have the courage of our convictions, and who seek to preserve what we are pleased to call our personal liberty (especially in so far as it concerns our personal adornment), are subjected to the most scathing feminine criticisms.

A week or so ago I blew myself to a dream of a light brown felt—an article, fetching thing (as I thought). I had been warned, I can't plead ignorance. Since then the indignities that have been heaped on me head in spite of its adornment (or rather because of it) would certainly rock a cellar. Pride went before the Fall (bonnet) in this case.

Discretion is the better part of valor. After three tries I give up. I have four dollars' worth of brand new (the last I will surrender all right, title and interest to for seven and a half cents on the dollar, the total representing the amount I felt like the last time I wore it.
